Calls Farm Plan 'A Colossal Flop'

Cites Supreme Court's Opinions; 4,500 Give Roaring Ovation.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8.—Alfred E. Smith, former Democratic candidate for President, set forth tonight his reasons for "taking a walk," declaring the main one was "repudiation" of the 1932 platform by the Roosevelt administration.

He made no reference to Gov. Alf M. Landon or his declaration last week that he would support the Kansas Governor for the Presidency.

Almost his entire speech was devoted to an explanation of the 1932 Democratic platform and an attack on the Roosevelt Administration for "repudiating" it.

"During the rest of the campaign," he declared, "I propose as far as it is humanly possible to develop my reasons for the walk, and I am going to start tonight in Philadelphia and go as far as I can in the radio time with the chief reason and that is the complete, the almost complete abandonment of the Democratic platform by the so-called Democratic, but really New Deal Administration."

He concluded his speech with an appeal to the audience to "separate the political bunk from the facts."

He said:

"Let me ask you to do something. Before you retire for the evening, go into communion with yourself, think about this country and what it has meant to you, and what it has meant to everybody from the day it was discovered, ask in that quiet make a solemn promise that from now until the 3d of November you will do everything that you can and induce your neighbor to do everything he can to separate the political bunk from the facts."

Meeting in Opera House.

Smith spoke at a meeting sponsored by a group of anti-New Deal Democrats, who called themselves "Old Line Democrats of Pennsylvania." The meeting was held in the old Metropolitan Opera House, built a quarter-century ago by the late Oscar Hammerstein.

The auditorium, which has about 4,500 seats, was filled and police estimated about 2,500 persons, who could not get in, listened to the speech over an amplifying system on the outside. The speech was broadcast nationally.

It was the second of a series of four speeches to be made by the 1928 Democratic standard bearer. He will speak October 22 in Chicago and October 31 in Albany, N. Y.

Almost at the outset of his address, Smith launched into his attack upon the New Deal for "repudiating" the platform.

"Here we have at the end of three and a half years," he said, "a record that indicates that every single plank with the exception of two have been repudiated."

He named these as the regulation of the stock exchange and the repeal of the prohibition amendment.

"And I had something to do with that," he said referring to repeal of prohibition.

"I desire to give full credit for carrying it out, although if the captains in charge of the New Deal party in Chicago got the kind of plank they wanted you would have nothing.

Continuing his attack, he said:

"The people that voted this Administration into power on the assumption that they stood for a certain set of principle found out afterwards that they had been entirely misled, and they put at the head of the Government a group of men, bent upon a program that has angered millions of citizens throughout the United States, citizens of

Potomac Dam To End Floods Roosevelt Aim

President Expresses Hope in Train Address at Cumberland.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 8.—President Roosevelt late today told a station crowd at this mountain industrial city that he hoped to see constructed a water-conservation project, including a dam on the Potomac River, to control the disastrous spring floods, which have reached as far as Washington.

It was Mr. Roosevelt's first rear-platform appearance on a 5,000-mile, nine-day tour of the Middle West, the Rocky Mountain States and the East.

Late last February Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, introduced a bill proposing to set up a Potomac Valley Authority to develop hydroelectric power, improve navigation, eliminate pollution, provide an adequate water supply, aid in flood control, preserve game and the game fish supply and provide recreation facilities.

This bill, at the time, did not win the approval of Mr. Roosevelt.

Never Proposed Before.

No such comprehensive scheme ever before had been proposed for the Potomac, the early development of which was one of the particular interests of George Washington and had been foreseen by Gen. (Lighthorse) Harry Lee, father of Robert E. Lee.

Discussion about a power development, however, has been going on for about 90 years. If ever a Potomac Valley Authority, similar in many ways, it is to be supposed, to the TVA, is set up, it certainly will center around this particular phase of the possibilities of the watershed.

Private capital has submitted three separate projects to the Federal Power Commission for a comprehensive development of the Potomac and its tributaries.

Senator George Norris, the Nebraska Republican, sponsor of the huge Norris Dam development, has repeatedly tried to get Great Falls power bills through Congress.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent by Congress on power surveys.

Three Army officers recently made three separate surveys and submitted as many reports. Independent surveys have been made by private engineers.

The Park and Planning Commission, however, became a factor in the situation when it opposed the

Defends Roosevelt From Red Charges

Professor at Catholic U. Warns Defeat Spells Rise of Communism.

By Robert C. Albright.

Challenging the economic and monetary views of Father Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest and New Deal critic, as essentially "wrong" and unsupported by Papal encyclicals, Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, last night called for the election of candidates opposed by the Detroit theologian.

Father Ryan defended President Roosevelt against charges of "communism," declared the Administration already had taken effective measures to check its spread, and appealed for an attack on "the main causes of communism" rather than "stigmatizing as communistic all fundamental reforms."

Ryan, who is professor of moral theology and industrial ethics at the university, and professor of political science at Trinity College, spoke over a radio network under auspices of the Democratic National Committee.

Calls Coughlin Wrong.

"I say deliberately to the laboring men and women of America that Father Coughlin's explanation of our economic maladies is at least 50 per cent wrong, and that his monetary remedies are at least 90 per cent wrong," said Father Ryan.

"If the latter were enacted into law they would prove disastrous to the great majority of the American people, particularly to the wage earner.

"Moreover, Father Coughlin's monetary theories and proposals find no support in the encyclicals of either Pope Leo XIII or Pope Pius XI. I think I know something about these encyclicals myself."

Brands Charges Cowardly.

He said charges that Roosevelt was closely associated with or supported by prominent Communists were "ugly, cowardly and flagrant calumnies." He denied that Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard; Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell, of the Resettlement Administration, or Sidney Hillman and David Dubinsky, labor supporters of the President, were communistic or had communistic leanings. And he declared that if President Roosevelt's policies were discredited through his defeat, "communism will enter upon a period of rapid growth and widespread influence in the United States."

Father Ryan, an authority on economics for 45 years and author of numerous books on the subject, was writing his first article when Father Coughlin was born, he told his radio audience. His book, "A Living Wage," was published before Father Coughlin entered college, he said. For 35 years he has been teaching economics, labor and ethical aspects of the industrial system in the classroom. He answered Father Coughlin "in the light of this experience," he said.

Father Ryan by name called for the re-election of several members of Congress opposed by the Detroit priest.

"Do not turn your backs upon those Congressmen who have consistently, valiantly and effectively fought your battles; for example, Jim Mead, of Buffalo; Pat Boland, of Scranton (House whip); Arthur Healey and John McCormack, of Massachusetts, and several of your other friends whose re-election is opposed by Father Coughlin," he added.

Father Ryan did not give Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, backed by Coughlin for the

Age Pensions Unit to Move To Baltimore

Social Security Board Rents Quarters for 300-400 Workers.

Duties Will Be of Type Not Now Performed in Washington.

The rapidly expanding Social Security Board staff, which already has occupied quarters in four Washington buildings, has taken 100,000 square feet of space in a large downtown office building in Baltimore, and will occupy it within the next two months, it was learned yesterday.

The board expects to set up the tabulating unit of the old-age pension division there, and contemplates employing between 300 and 400 clerks and machine operators, according to information obtained by The Post.

Although the board's information service here reported yesterday negotiations for quarters in the Maryland city are "still under way," it is understood space has been rented in the Candler Building, and that a contract for business and calculating machines already has been let.

One Security Board official, who admitted establishment of a branch of the old-age pension division in Baltimore was contemplated, said it would not involve moving any department from Washington. The work to be done, he said, is not of a type now being performed here.

Hard-Pressed for Room.

The Social Security Board, which is without a home of its own, has been hard-pressed for room. Its activities are now scattered in several old Government and commercial buildings in Washington. The use of quarters in Baltimore for the new branch is said to be prompted by inability of officials to find enough office space in the Capital. The 100,000 square feet of room will occupy several floors of the Baltimore building.

The work to be carried on in Baltimore will be almost entirely that requiring machine operation, and even if the job of moving in equipment is started at once, at least two months is expected to be required for installation and training of operators.

Spreading of the Social Security Administration to Baltimore, follows a recent conference at Hyde Park, N. Y., between President Roosevelt and John G. Winant, then chairman of the board.

Foresaw New Building.

The President, discussing at that time the space problem confronting the board envisioned a new building as large, at least, as the new Interior Department Building, in the Capital.

It is expected administration of the act ultimately will be one of the largest of Federal tasks. There has been no indication as to the site on which a new Social Security Building would be erected.

Chairman Winant and Frank Dayne, member of the board, are reported to have informed President Roosevelt that the board, when all its activities are functioning, will require a minimum of 500,000 square feet to accommodate the vast records of thousands of individual beneficiaries of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance.

Blind Newsie Hurt In 9-Foot Plunge Down Cellar Entry

Thomas Conley, 20, a blind newspaper vender, was in an undetermined condition at Emergency Hospital last night after a fall through a sidewalk cellar-entrance in front of a restaurant in the 700 block Twelfth street northwest.

According to William Maragos, manager of the restaurant, Willie Saunders, 29, a colored dishwasher, was emerging from the cellar when Conley plunged over a guard chain. Saunders was knocked from the stairs, he said, and plunged nine feet to the bottom to land on top of Conley. Saunders was uninjured.

Russia Accuses Portugal.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 8.—Russia tonight specifically charged Portugal with intervening in the Spanish civil war and reiterated that she would consider herself free to "act as she sees fit."

The charges, contained in a second note delivered to the international committee for nonintervention in Spain by Soviet Delegate Samuel Kagan, came while diplomats of 27 nations held frenzied conferences, hoping to prevent the ultimatum from plunging Europe into possible war.

Yesterday Russia flatly told the committee that if Fascist powers did not stop aiding Spanish Fascist rebels, she would consider herself freed from the neutrality pact. Today Kagan delivered the second note specifically charging Portugal with several violations of the neutrality agreement. Germany and Italy were mentioned in a general denunciation.

The note charged that a Portuguese state-owned munitions factory in Barcelona sent shells and machine guns to the Spanish rebels while asphyxiating gas of Italian manufacture was sent from Lisbon to the Spanish frontier for the insurgents. The note then summarized American and other press reports purporting to describe Italian and German aid for Franco's armies.

The note reviewed the allegation of the Spanish loyalist government in its note of September 15 that Portugal was being used as a base of operations for supplies for the rebel forces. The note demanded that an impartial commission be dispatched to the Spanish-Portuguese frontier to investigate charges of neutrality violation and that observers be stationed there to assure adherence to the neutrality agreement.

The Russian notes had the effect of exploding bombs among the diplomats of the neutrality committee, and in British and French foreign offices.

Crisis Precipitated.

It was admitted tacitly that the Soviet Union's ultimatum had precipitated a long-feared crisis—one which finds the Fascist nations diplomatically pitted against anti-Fascist powers.

Meanwhile, Lord Plymouth informed members of the committee of the four-point agenda for tomorrow's meeting here:

The Spanish government's complaints of outside aid to rebels, which, it was understood, British consuls in Spain have been investigating.

Counsel Demands Own Staff or Closing of Office as Worthless.

By James D. Secrest.

A feud that dated back several years yesterday broke out into a demand from People's Counsel William A. Roberts that his office be abolished unless he be given a staff of investigators detached from the Public Utilities Commission.

"It has become clear that the duties and responsibilities of the office of people's counsel, actively performed, awaken antagonism and resentment on the part of the Public Utilitis Commission and its staff," Roberts said in his annual report to the president of each local citizens' association.

"The people's counsel should either be provided with a small but adequate investigational staff of his own so that the public's position may be adequately presented, or else the office of people's counsel should be abolished and the Public Utilities Commission charged with the sole responsibility of representing the viewpoint of the consumers."

Since his appointment more than two years ago, Roberts has been at loggerheads with the commission. While the feud between the two offices existed while Richmond B. Keech, now vice chairman of the commission, was people's counsel, it has been more marked since Roberts took office.

Many Differences.

Within the last few months the commission and the people's counsel have differed on the Monroe street bus case, the one-man car increase, the bus ventilation order, and the proposed purchase by the Washington Gas Light Co. of the Hyattsville and Alexandria gas plants, to mention only the more important issues.

Roberts also disclosed in his report that he intends to sponsor legislation to abolish the zone taxicab system and to force the Capital Transit Co. to maintain adequate reserves for the rehabilitation of its property.

He suggested the revival of a half dozen other pieces of legislation and various activities relating to public utilities.

The taxicab issue is another controversial point between the commission and the people's counsel, but the attitude of the two agencies has been reversed since the fight started some five years ago.

When Keech was people's counsel

Rebels Threaten to Blow Up Madrid Unless It Surrenders

Insurgent Planes Circle Over Capital, Dropping Printed Ultimatums; Some of Troops Are Almost Within Shelling Distance of City.

First actual scenes after raising of siege of the Alcazar—Page 10.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 8.—Rebel leaders tonight threatened "to blow Madrid to pieces" unless it surrenders to the insurgent legions almost within shelling distance of the capital.

"We recommend that the civil population do everything in its power to make the government surrender," read circulars showered on Madrid from rebel war planes.

"The greater the resistance the greater will be the attack," they read. "Madrid will be bombarded intensely from both land and air."

Rebel lines tonight boxed Madrid on three sides, with only the eastern sector open.

Some units of the troops on the southern side were almost within shelling distance of the capital.

Steadily the southern and bottom side of the box was stretched longer past Madrid. The strategy then was to march troops on this line due north, completely boxing the capital.

The insurgent juggernaut under Gen. Francisco Franco rolled swiftly, bowling over town after town in its path, tonight capturing San Martin Valdiglesias, strategic junction for the rebel armies.

Their war planes circled over Madrid throughout the day, the pilots dumping hundreds of printed surrender ultimatums upon the city's inhabitants.

Further resistance was useless, the ultimatums read, and the populace had best declare allegiance to the insurgent provisional government or suffer the same fate as Irun, bombed and pillaged when it was captured by Gen. Emilio Mola a month ago.

One column of rebels charged to within 6 miles of Aranjuez, 30 miles south of the capital. It was this wing which the rebels hoped to extend so that Madrid might be completely surrounded, with all avenues of escape blocked.

To the west, another column drove over Escalona and fought forward to join comrades further along the Maqueda-Madrid highway.

Rebel cavalry in the Sierra de Credos sector due west of Madrid charged down on San Martin de Valdeiglesias.

Fascist Chief's Offices Raided By Paris Police

Foes of La Rocque Charge He Plotted Revolution for This Winter.

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The government struck swiftly today to stamp out fascism in France, raiding homes and offices of members of the French Social Party, which is charged with being the illegal successor of Col. Francois La Rocque's banned Croix de Feu.

Charges were drawn against La Rocque and his lieutenants, alleging they were reconstituting the dissolved organization and inciting illegal assembly.

Political opponents of the Fascist leader asserted he planned a revolution and that the Fascists had been smuggling arms across the Swiss frontier for use in an armed uprising this winter.

Paris Offices Rifled.

Police descended on various Paris offices of La Rocque's organization. Guards were stationed at doors. Crowds were kept at a distance. No one was allowed to enter or leave the buildings. Officers rifled desks and filing cases, seizing documents.

At La Rocque's home in the Rue St. Mederic, police seized a pistol, a dagger made in Germany and bearing a swastika, five sword canes, three blackjacks and numerous photographs, manuscripts and printed documents.

La Rocque was unperturbed.

"I am happy. It keeps me busy," he remarked dryly.

'Dead' Veteran Asked by U. S. To Tell All; Widow Dubious

Jesse Owen Gifford, the "dead" war veteran who was resurrected from oblivion when he recently applied for his bonus, "will have a lot of explaining to do," his wife in Nashville declared yesterday.

The Veterans' Bureau here likewise is anxious for him to tell his tale, and is hopeful that he will have a word or two of explanation soon. They have asked the "dead man" to tell all, they said yesterday.

His attractive, 31-year-old "widow" in Nashville yesterday told the Associated Press she still loved her husband.

"Of course I love him," she said. "I'd want him to come back home for the sake of the two boys. They adore their father. But I don't believe he is alive.

"I'd have to see this man that the Veterans' Administration says has claimed the money they paid me. And I'd want a good explanation of why he's been gone so long."

Whether the "dead man" gets his bonus of $1,277.44, which already has been paid to his wife, is a question which will require the combined brains of the Comptroller's Office, the courts, the War Department and the Veterans' Administration.

Only the Veterans' Bureau is positive he is alive.

"There were never two sets of fingerprints exactly alike in all mankind," an official said yesterday. "We have positively identified the applicant as being alive, and our regional director has talked to him.

Treasury Employe Fired for Move to Enlist Corps of 830,000 Veterans to Fight Reds, Jews

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—An energetic United States Treasury employe, who said he had the backing of one of Alfred E. Smith's strongest supporters, was suspended tonight after he announced plans for a militaristic veteran reserve corps of 830,400 members to combat alleged radical influence of Jews and Reds.

He is Hubert W. Eldred, who has been working with the department's Procurement Division, doing WPA work here. His suspension was announced by T. J. Forde, State procurement officer, a few hours after Eldred's elaborate plans were revealed.

He displayed a copy of "General Order No. 3" to State commanding officers:

"Start enrolling at once following units numbered as follows: 40 divisions, 160 brigades of infantry, infantry regiments, 400,000. By order Hubert W. Eldred, commanding Veterans Reserve Corps."

Eldred said his organization, started six weeks ago, already has 3,000 members, composed mostly of reserve officers taken from the rolls of the WPA and the Treasury Department. Its goal of 830,400 members is several times the size of the National Guard.

He said they will be uniformed and trained regularly at rifle practice and military drill under direction of a "White Russian, Vladimir Kusick, "who gives Grand Duchess Marie as a personal reference."

He warned against what he termed "the growing influence of Jews and Reds," and said that his men were pledged to combat "Radical" influence.

He claimed as one of the organization's principal supporters Mrs. Mable Jacques Eichel, national director of the Independent Coalition of American Women which sponsored Smith's recent anti-New Deal speech.

An amendment to the national defense act has been prepared, he revealed, which would place the corps in regular service. He announced Admiral Richmond P. Hobson as "Naval Chief of Operations."

Eldred was worried about losing his job with the Treasury Department, but "I'm more worried about the Reds and Jews," he said.

He had no compunctions, he said, about working for Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., a Jew, because "I wouldn't include him among the Jews this country ought to fear."

Miss Edna Campbell, publicity director for the Women's Coalition, said she doubted if Mrs. Eichel had made the promise attributed to her and explained that the women's body could not be directed to any cause by any one member.

Col. Roy P. Monahan, judge advocate general of the corps, announced following Eldred's revelations that he would resign because of Eldred's anti-Semitic views. He said he did not know of Eldred's racial attitude until today.

Treasury Asks Report.

Treasury Department officials last night asked representatives of the Treasury procurement division in New York for a full report on activities of Hubert W. Eldred. Personnel records here show that Eldred has been a project clerk and that he previously was employed by the New York relief administration. They show that he was a captain of infantry in the World War.

Drivers on Strike, Police to Escort Funeral Corteges

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Police escorts for funeral processions were promised by city authorities today as hundreds of hearse drivers went on the picket line in the first strike of its kind since the days of horse-drawn hearses.

Health Commissioner John L. Rice, pointing out it was a misdemeanor to obstruct or delay a funeral, said:

"There will be adequate police protection in order that there will be no interference with the proper disposal of dead bodies."

He estimated there were 200 deaths a day in New York City.

Members of the Funeral Chauffers Union voted at a stormy meeting last night to walk out in a demand for a $5 weekly pay rise. The present minimum wage is $30.

Elephant, in Rage, Kills Her Trainer; Repents and Cries

Beaumont, Tex., Oct. 8 (AP).—The sudden rage which prompted Tribly, a one-eyed circus elephant, to crush the life from Lee Roberts, 20, when he disturbed her sleep, gave way tonight to deep remorse.

Lawrence Davis, head elephant trainer for Barnum & Bailey & Ringling Brothers Circus, said the elephant had been crying ever since she seized Roberts with her trunk, hurled him against the elephant car wall, then crushed him to death under her massive feet.

The sorrowing Tribly went through her paces at today's matinee, after the rampage, and officials said they anticipated no further trouble with her.

Davis, explaining that elephants sleep standing, said Roberts had failed to rouse the napping animal by speaking to her before he attempted to place a collar on her.

Witnesses said Tribly, apparently startled as Roberts lowered the collar over her head, attacked before he could move.

A. F. L. Council Ignores Rebels In Parley Here

Resignation of Dubinsky Is Accepted by Leaders Without Comment.

By Sidney Olson.

Touching the vital matter of a united labor front only indirectly, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor recessed last night after the first day's sessions of their quarterly meeting without taking concrete action toward reconciliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The resignation of David Dubinsky, of New York, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers, as vice president of the federation and a member of the council, was accepted speedily, and according to A. F. L. President William Green, "without comment."

The union Dubinsky has represented in the councils of the A. F. of L. is now affiliated with the C. I. O., dominated by John L. Lewis, Green's chief opponent in the struggle between craft unionism and industrial unionism.

A reporter asked Green if any regrets had been expressed over Dubinsky's resignation.

"Regrets?" questioned Green. "No, sir!"

The matter of a successor to Dubinsky was not formally considered by the council, Green said, although individual candidates were informally advanced by several persons.

Only Matter on Agenda.

This indirect reference, the Dubinsky resignation, was the only matter on the official agenda of the council for the day that touched on the delicate question of peace between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

Green reserved comment, but implied that there were "plenty of avenues open" through which a settlement of the factional dispute could be obtained. He said that recent conversations he has had with Dubinsky and Max Zaritsky, president of the Cap and Millinery Workers, "intensified the possibilities of peace."

"Their expressions in favor of settlement of the differences now existing indicate that all hope for a reconciliation is far from gone," he said.

The rosy-cheeked labor leader flared only once, while discussing the procedure involving suspension of the ten C. I. O. unions from the A. F. of L. Stressing the "democratic decision" by the "majority vote," he emphasized that the fate of Lewis and his allies would lie in the hands of the national convention of the A. F. of L. in Tampa, Fla., in November. The C. I. O. strength is more than one-third, or 1,300,000 members, of the 3,000,000 members of the Federation:

Cites C. I. O. Challenge.

Green shouted:

"And if anyone challenges the democratic decision of the majority voting in the convention, he should appear now before the council and state his views," Green said. "The C. I. O. has challenged the authority of the executive council, but not as yet that of the convention's vote."

Most of the council's sessions were consumed in discussions with Sir Walter Citrine, of London, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, and W. Schevenels, of Brussels, Belgium, general secretary of that organization.

The two foreign labor chieftains outlined to the council a plan under which the A. F. of L could rejoin the International Federation without being bound by pledges to participate in settlement of foreign labor disputes.

Green announced that on next Tuesday afternoon he will meat with representatives of all sides concerned in the labor struggle in Seattle, Wash., between a Hearst newspaper, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer and the American Newspaper Guild, over the discharge of two employes.

'Dead' Veteran Urged by U. S. To Tell Story

We are urging him now to make public his story."

The "widow," two dentists and several relatives, on the other hand, assert Gifford is dead, and the courts of Tennessee have so found him. As far as the Tennesseeans are concerned, Gifford is legally dead and buried in a cemetery at South Pittsburgh, Tenn., and has been for five years.

The bonus law holds the key to the puzzle.

As enacted by Congress, it forbids disclosure of any facts of any kind whatsoever about applicants, therefore any details about Gifford's present whereabouts, his reasons for disappearing, and what has happened to him during his five years' absence, are being scrupulously withheld. Not even Mrs. Gifford may obtain any information about her supposedly deceased husband.

A little less than eight years ago, Gifford disappeared while on a business trip. He was a traveling salesman. Three years later a body was found in the Tnnessee River, with a bullet hole in its head. Numerous persons identified it as Gifford's and it was buried, Mrs. Gifford receiving about $1,000 in insurance and subsequently receiving the veteran's bonus money.

Shortly after its discovery, a business associate of Gifford was arrested and tried for his murder. A magistrate's court dismissed the case.

Veterans' officials who like to speculate not only on such matters as resurrection, but on Federal red tape, said yesterday they believed the Government would sue Mrs. Gifford to collect the bonus money paid her, that the Comptroller's office would have to rule on paying the "ghost," and that hthe War Department and Veterans' Administration probably would have to investigate the case further.

Son of a President Is Under Many Handicaps When It Comes to Earning a Living.

By Franklyn Waltman

BEING the son of a President is a difficult role to live, especially if he is beyond school age and must seek a livelihood in the world. In this day of Federal jurisdiction over, or bounty to, most lines of private enterprise, it would seem almost impossible for a President's son to hold a job without working for some supplicant of the Washington Government.

WALTMAN.

Take the case of Elliott Roosevelt. Several years ago he worked in the aviation industry, which is almost wholly dependent on the reigning Administration in Washington through air-mail contracts, Army and Navy orders and regulation of that enterprise. Now he is manager of several radio stations for his father's bitter foe, William Randolph Hearst. The Federal Government, through the Communications Commission, holds radio activities in the palm of its hand.

Suspicions always attach to such employments. Even though 25-year-old Elliott may be a radio wizard or an aviation genius, there is always someone around who believes that he is employed, not because of his own ability, but because he is the President's son and might be able to exert some influence at Washington.

Few people believed that any broadcaster would have paid thousands of dollars to the late Louis McHenry Howe for making 15-minute talks on the air if he had not been the President's secretary. Nor would the activities of some other members of the President's personal and official family be in such demand if they were ordinary citizens instead of coasting along on his name.

Let it be quickly said that as far as we know there is nothing inherently wrong about any of these relationships. But they are not proper. Quite frequently the purchaser of such talent thinks he is getting influence, when he is not. On other occasions such arrangements are made in order to get an outstanding name and that smacks of commercializing the White House. That is one place in this country about which the American people should never have any doubts, even in the heat of a campaign.

It is a long-established custom that the White House should never be commercialized. The rule here is far more rigid than in Europe. A British distiller can boast in his advertisement that he is the distiller to His Majesty, the King, or his Highness, the Prince of Wales. A Bond street clothier may attract business by proclaiming to the world that he is His Majesty's tailor.

But tradesmen with the White House are strictly forbidden to make capital of the White House as a customer. You do not know who is Mr. Roosevelt's tailor, unless you read it in some personality sketch. Nor do automobile manufacturers boast that they supply the White House motors.

The White House ban against commercializing its patronage is a proper one and one which the country would be shocked to see violated. And yet there does not seem to be much difference between the President collecting fees for his indorsement of this or that soap, and members of his entourage lending their prestige for honorariums to the advertisement of bed mattresses, the sale of insurance or the promotion of airlines, radio stations or even syndicated newspaper columns.

The recent disclosure of the affidavit to the Senate Munitions Committee by Anthony Fokker, the airplane inventor, asserting he had entered into a contract to pay young Elliott Rosevelt $500,000 for selling a number of military planes to Russia, is in a different category. On its face, this affidavit raised a very serious question, for the use of the youth's family connection in making the proposed sale, was specified—and the affidavit was peculiarly made public on Senator Gerald P. Nye's instructions without explanation.

Senator Nye subsequently asserted that the Senate committee placed no credence in the affidavit, although it seems to have made little investigation, and Mr. Roosevelt categorically denies certain major allegations in the affidavit. The action of the Nye committee in withholding this affidavit from the public for a year is certainly questionable. Had such an affidavit, whether true or not, been made regarding an economic royalist, it would have been made public with a great fanfare—and the committee would have set its investigators to straining to substantiate it.

It would have been better for all parties concerned had the committee, after quietly investigating the Fokker charges and finding them untrue, issued a statement announcing that the allegations had been made, but that they could not be substantiated or that they had been definitely disproved. Such a course would have inspired confidence in the committee and would have prevented ugly rumors and whispers.

The fact that the affidavit was taken at its face value for the first few hours after its release by Senator Nye is hardly flattering to the White House, but that is the price paid for carelessness by the White House entourage is failing to keep free from commercial alliances. Presidents' sons like Caesar's wife, should be above suspicion and avoid appearances that lead to suspicion.

And yet, as I said in the beginning, a President's son has a hard role to play. If he works it might be argued he is trading on his dad's name. If he doesn't work, somebody calls him "a good-for-nothing bum." Former President Hoover became enraged when it was pointed out that his son worked as a radio engineer for an aviation company which was favored by the Post-office Department in the drafting of specifications for an airmail contract. Several weeks later, however, young Hoover left the company.

What is a President's son to do? you demand. I am sure I do not know. He might become a Chinese missionary—but even then if bandits seized him, he might involve this country in a war.

Grandi to Stay in London.

Rome, Oct. 8 (AP).—Dino Grandi pleaded successfully with Premier Benito Mussolini, authoritative sources said tonight, to be retained as Italian Ambassador to England. Reports said Il Duce acceded on physicians' reports Grandi's health would not be impaired and agreed to leave him in London. Earlier it had been reported Raffaele Guariglia, veteran Italian diplomat, had been designated to succeed Grandi.

Two Agitators Jailed.

New Orleans, Oct. 8 (AP).—Possession of literature which police charged had a "tendency to incite riot," resulted in the conviction today of William G. Binkley and Clifford Danna. Each was sentenced to 25 days in jail and fined $25. A third defendant, Miss Eleanor Hoagland, a Y. W. C. A. worker, was acquitted. The literature was found in living quarters occupied by Binkley who said he was a Communist organizer.

Col. Knox Calls Regime of Foes Unpredictable

Nobody Knows What Roosevelt Will Do, Charges G. O. P. Nominee.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 8.—Declaring "nobody knows" what the Roosevelt Administration will do if re-elected, Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, tonight asked "Will it default on the promises in Government bonds?"

"It defaulted on the gold promises," he said, "in $20,000,000,000 of bonds."

Knox raised the question in an address before a Republican rally. In another phase of his attack he asserted that every Democratic President of the past, "from Thomas Jefferson to Woodrow Wilson," would have "walked out" on the New Deal.

"What Does It Offer?"

"After three and a half years of waste, of experimentation, of regimentation and of failure," he declared, "this Administration comes to the American people and asks for approval. What does it offer? Nobody knows. If it is given approval, what will it do?

"Will it establish another NRA? Will it establish another AAA?"

The Chicago publisher also renewed the running fire he has directed at President Roosevelt, again charging the President with changing front since 1932, when Mr. Roosevelt was in the role of critic.

The President then said, Knox recalled, that the Republican Party was committed to the idea that "we ought to center control of everything in Washington," while the Democratic concept was the "exact reverse." The Democratic idea, Knox quoted the President as saying, was "to take from the States nothing more than is necessary to keep abreast of the march of our changing economic situation."

Kind of Rule Held Issue.

Knox held this up as "a gem," and asserted:

"I submit that merely quoting that statement ought to cause the ghost of the Blue Eagle to run squawking from its grave, and the ghosts of little pigs to go tearing over the landscape."

Knox declared the basic issue of the campaign to be "what kind of Government we want," saying it is "not a campaign between the Republican Party and the Democratic Party." Then he asserted:

"If Grover Cleveland were alive, I know in my heart he would repudiate the New Deal. From Thomas Jefferson to Woodrow Wilson there was never a Democratic President but would have repudiated the measures of this Administration. Those great men would have walked out, too."

Suppression Charged.

That the Roosevelt Administration "willfully" undertook to suppress the rights of the American citizens "to free enterprise and personal liberty" was another charge Knox made.

"By propaganda, by Governmental coercion, and by gifts of other people's money," he declared, "it has attempted to force the people to abandon these immemorial rights. And in this attempt it delayed recovery and increased the miseries of a distressed people.

"You don't want any more of such a Government. You cannot afford to have such a Government."

Swedish Flier Due In France Tuesday

Valentia, Irish Free State, Oct. 8 (AP).—Cheated of victory, but uninjured, Kurt Bjorkvall, 31, Sweden's transatlantic flier, was en route tonight to La Rochelle, France, aboard the French trawler Imbrin.

Bjorkvall abandoned his big red and blue Bellanca plane to choppy seas, 100 miles off the west coast of Ireland, where he was recued yesterday after being forced down 1,000 miles short of his goal on the 4,500-mile hop from Floyd Bennett Field, New York, to Stockholm.

The Imbrin, which spotted Bjorkvall's plane wallowing on a moonlit sea late yesterday, set out for its French home port after the crew had failed in attempts to salvage the plane.

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Dr. F. E. Townsend's announcement that he would vote for Alf M. Landon for President was characterized today by James A. Farley as unimportant, while Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., Eastern Republican campaign manager, said it would be "very helpful" to the Republican cause.

Farley, Democratic National chairman, said the action of Dr. Townsend, head of the old age pension organization, "won't mean a thing."

"California," he added, "if safe for Roosevelt in any event."

Martin said the "helpful effect" of Townsend's support would not be confined to California, but would be felt "in Ohio and other Eastern States."

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Democratic National Committee said today indorsement of President Roosevelt for re-election by two more of the big railroad labor organizations would be announced tomorrow in the newspaper, Labor.

The organizations, said the committee, are the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Joseph E. Davies, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission in the Wilson Administration, today accepted appointment as vice chairman of the Democratic National Campaign Committee and chairman of the executive committee of the campaign committee.

* * * *

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 8 (AP).—Gov. Guy B. Park had before him tonight a charge that Kansas City's registration for the November election was padded by the names of 60,000 illegal voters and an investigation had shown "fraud and plenty of it."

The charge was made to Park, a Democrat, by Fred E. Whitten, president of the Citizens' League of Kansas City, who said he is a Democrat.

Park, who recently removed the St. Louis election board, announced he intended to call the Kansas City board's attention to Whitten's charges but said Fred Bellemere, chairman of the board, recently "told me we are doing everything we can to assist in the investigation of the election fraud charges."

* * * *

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The national campaign committee of the Socialist Party today charged the Democratic and Republican parties with "collusion designed to eliminate the issue of the Constitution amendment from the Presidential campaign."

In a statement issued at Socialist headquarters here the committee said: "This collusion takes the form of a giant whispering campaign, far more effective than such efforts generally are in the week before election, because of it being engineered by the campaign strategists of both old parties.

"Despite the intense interest expressed by the people of America last spring, following the voiding of certain New Deal acts by the Supreme Court and the clear necessity for constitutional amendment, both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Landon have decided to sidestep these issues."

* * * *

In a radio speech entitled "Landon Impossible," George M. Harrison, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, said last night election of Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee, would "repudiate the program which brought the Nation out of economic chaos, and which has rebuilt our national self-respect."

"We are being asked to turn our backs upon the man whose brilliant leadership defeated the depression, and whose wise statesmanship points the way to greater prosperity and social security for all the people," Harrison said in a speech under the joint auspices of labor's nonpartisan league, the Progressive National Committee and the Good Neighbor League.

Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 8 (AP).—James W. Ford, Negro, Communist Vice Presidential candidate, in an address outside the gates of the University of California today appealed for students' support in the Communist fight which "indorses fully as does no other party American youths' demands."

Ford asserted "the Presidential issue — Democracy vs. Fascism — should be supported by students in the interests of the world generally."

* * * *

Indianapolis, Oct. 8 (AP).—John Zahnd, national chairman of the National Greenback Party, said today that "in view of President Roosevelt's tactics" his future campaign activities would be concentrated upon a half dozen States.

"Roosevelt is making five speeches in Michigan," he said at a press conference. "It's the first time in the history of politics that a President will make five speeches in one State."

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, conferred today with Democratic Chairman James A. Farley and said the Republicans had no chance to break into the solid South this year.

Clark Raps Nye On Plane Story

By the Associated Press.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, yesterday wired Chairman Nye (Republican), North Dakota, of the Senate Munitions Committee, he was "amazed" Nye had given the press a document from executive files of the committee which had never been put in evidence.

Nye's statement concerned an unfulfilled contract between Anthony H. G. Fokker, airplane builder, and Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President.

Clark wired Nye his action "is the more remarkable in view of the fact that upon motion of Senator Vandenberg, an eminent Republican Senator, the committee by a unanimous vote, including your own, decided nearly two years ago that there was nothing in the matter presented to us which was within proper jurisdiction of our committee or warranted further investigation on our part."

Clark said Nye's action "simply serves to give more publicity to a canard in what seems to be as cheap a political trick as has been seen in years."

Annual Autumn Exhibition which closes tonight

8 to 10:30

It isn't just a display of merchandise, although that is beautiful in itself. But you will find the manner of presentation inspirational—suggesting many ideas which you can adopt in your own home—which after all is the intent and purpose of these exhibitions.

We are deeply interested in better home furnishing—done with consistency in design and with quality—which by no means is expensive.

As you review the exhibition you will witness the authentic evolution of furniture and furnishings, covering the four centuries—together with demonstrations of quality which enter into the construction of Sloane furniture and that give it title to "Finest Furniture in America."

We are expecting you tonight—and you will find enough of interest to engage your attention.

William Hard's Papers 'Phony,' Hopkins Says

Assails Affidavits, Holds Jones Helped 'Smear' Mrs. Roosevelt.

Branding as "phonies" all affidavits on WPA political "coercion" in Pennsylvania broadcast by William Hard, under Republican National Committee auspices, Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday assailed methods allegedly used in collecting the depositions.

He directed his assault specifically at Sam M. Jones, publicity man in Washington for the Republican National Committee, who he said collects Hard's data for him.

"This is the Jones who put on the campaign to smear Mrs. Roosevelt in Georgia," said Hopkins. "He is well-known in labor spy circles.

"It looks like you've done a little spying yourself," a reporter remarked.

"I've looked him up," Hopkins replied.

He said Jones, financed by the Republican National Committee, is sending men "posing as legitimate reporters" into Pennsylvania and other States. He charged WPA workers are "entertained" by the men, who interview WPA employes while buying them food and drink.

Calls Statement Lie.

Jones replied in a statement last night that Hopkins had picked up "an outright lie" published in a morning Philadelphia newspaper "either through malice or stupidity." Jones added: "judging from previous experience with Mr. Hopkins' outfit, the latter probably is correct."

Hopkins had referred reporters to hearings before the Black committee for Jones' record. Jones in his reply quoted the morning newspaper story as saying that "under sharp cross-examination by Black (the Black snooping committee) Jones admitted he had acted as press agent for this organization (the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution) and assisted in distribution of literature defaming Mrs. Roosevelt during sessions of the Talmadge Grass Roots convention in Macon. Jones said he helped distribute throughout the South pictures of Mrs. Roosevelt in the company of two Negroes."

In his statement last night, Jones said the record of the Black investigating committee will prove this is untrue. Allegations from other sources that he has been in the employ of the Railway Audit & Inspection Co., Jones said were also untrue, adding, "I have never been. Nor have I been connected with any other so-called strike-breaking organizations."

Jones said every newspaperman in Washington knew he had been handling the Washington publicity offices of the Republican National Committee.

Charges Law Evasions.

"They are also quite familiar with the fact that I have directed the field work in collecting the material for William Hard. Our men do not misrepresent themselves as 'newspapermen' but most of them are better newspapermen than the so-called 'information directors' of the WPA who attempt to evade the law prohibiting publicity individuals on the public pay roll by picking up an alias."

Hopkins told reporters earlier that every affidavit read to date by Hard he had found on investigation was a "phony." He declared Hard only spoke "what is put in his mouth by Jones."

In his radio address last night, Hard presented a new batch of affidavits which he said "proved conclusively the oft-repeated charges of the desperate underhand methods the New Deal is employing to try to swing Pennsylvania support to Roosevelt."

Hard countered Hopkins spy charges, by reading a letter he said was anonymous "because of fear."

The letter said "we have spies working on every job and no man among us dares express our views only for Roosevelt on pain of being discharged."

He read other sworn statements alleging "coercion" in WPA and indorsements by Democratic politicians declared necessary to get WPA relief. He said one affidavit was signed by Irwin A. Williamson, of Upper Darby, Pa., former assistant head of WPA educational and recreational projects in the State, declaring he was required to specify friends of Democratic politicians for WPA teaching jobs.

Arguments Enliven Hearing on Zoning

After listening to several bitter arguments over alley property the District Zoning Commission yesterday deferred its decisions on more than a score of street fronting property and five alley cases until next week.

The biggest fight yesterday revolved around a petition of Howard P. Foley Co., Inc., for official approval of a warehouse it has been using in its electrical equipment business for two years at the rear of 2020 I street. The protests came from a group of residents in the area represented by James C. Wilkes, attorney.

Another battle occurred over a proposal to expand the floor space of an automobile repair shop at the rear of 1224 Thirteenth street. Joseph Low, representing the owners of a nearby apartment house, complained that the alley is already congested with traffic.

Mrs. Hitchcock Is Train Guest Of First Lady

Widow of Publisher Is for Roosevelt, Although Her Paper Isn't.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the Presidential Special, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Roosevelt's first "house guest" on this Midwestern campaign tour with her husband was Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, widow of the Omaha publisher.

Mrs. Hitchcock, whose husband was leader of the Senate after the World War, will go with the Roosevelts as far as Omaha, then return to her Washington home.

Her presence was noted with interest because the Omaha World-Herald, the independent Democrat paper her husband founded and published up to the time of his death, declared this year for Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican nominee.

But Mrs. Hitchcock, who inherited majority stock in the World-Herald, said today:

"I'm still for Roosevelt."

As soon as the train was well under way, Mrs. Roosevelt called at the compartment of handsome, blue-eyed gray-haired Mrs. Hitchcock, inviting her into the Presidential car for lunch, and chatting with her until lunch time when the two went back together. The family luncheon party also included the Roosevelts' daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt.

As usual, Mrs. Roosevelt was "traveling light."

Her whole wardrobe for the ten-day trip, with many public appearances, consisted of one severe and trimly tailored black suit worn with black satin blouse brightened by a roll-over gold satin collar and a big old gold medallion on an antique chain; another suit of blue homespun in sports style, coat full-length for which she brought four blouses; one thin topcoat for warm weather; one black fur cape in case of cold weather; one silk "afternoon dress of maroon," one evening dress of black and silver, one very large and dashing black hat, one smaller hat and one "campaign hat."

This last hat Mrs. Roosevelt described as a "felt hat of nondescript blue which will stand the pouring rain, because I have never been on one of these trips that it hasn't somewhere simply poured rain."

She had her knitting along, of course—she's working on a pair of socks and a sweater—and "lots of books" which she hopes to find time to read.

With Mrs. Roosevelt is her secretary, Mrs. Malvinia Thompson Scheider.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she would not get up in the morning in time for the Chicago stop (4:45 to 5 a. m.) but would be on hand for the back-platform appearance at Dubuque, Iowa, at 9 a. m.

Labor Official Warns Of Ship Strike Spread

The possibility of a crippling maritime strike which might spread to Gulf and Atlantic ports was foreseen last night by Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, unless West Coast ship owners and unions reconcile their differences immediately.

"They have agreed to nothing yet," he said, as he announced definite plans to fly to San Francisco in a last-ditch effort to bring the groups to agreement.

Vetoed by Army Engineers.

Even before the Potomac went on its disastrous flood rampage last March, Army engineers vetoed flood-control and improvement of navigation on the river.

The Rankin bill proposed improvement of navigation, elimination of river pollution, development of adequate water supply and direct or incidental production of electric power.

Incident to power production would be flood control.

"Floods are frequent in the Potomac watershed," said the most complete Army engineers' report on the subject, which was submitted by Maj. Brehon Somervell in 1932.

"Floods have occurred at Great Falls 36 times during the past 54 years. Flood damage is relatively small," the report said.

Maj. Somervell touched upon the flood situation at Cumberland, where today the President made his statement.

Own Control Program.

He pointed out at the time that Cumberland had a flood control program of its own.

Yet this program did not prevent tremendous damage to this busy industrial city, near the Potomac's headwaters, last spring.

And in March, 1934, floods did an estimated damage of $4,000,000 here.

Comprehensive development of the basin's power resources would reduce flood damage at Washington, but wouldn't eliminate it if power reservoirs were full when a storm occurred," remarked the major.

Greatest floods on the Potomac have been those of this spring, of 1877, of 1881, of 1889, of 1902, of 1924 and of 1928. The flood of 1889 was the worst.

38 Stops Planned.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Roosevelt Train en route Westward, Oct. 8.—President Roosevelt carried his re-election campaign Westward tonight, seeking to capture 183 electoral votes in 11 States he has arranged to stump in the next 9 days.

The itinerary, whipped into final shape just before the 11-car Presidential train pulled out of Washington at noon, listed 38 stops in addition to major addresses at Omaha and Chicago and two more at Denever and Detroit.

Whether the Omaha speech, listed for Saturday night, would emphasize agriculture, became a subject of speculation on the Roosevelt train. It was occasioned particularly by the presence of Secretary Wallace and Alfred C. Stedman, New Deal agricultural officials.

With the passenger list swelled by an increased number of reporters and photographers, and a larger official party, the Roosevelt train was the longest since he took office.

Dubuque, Iowa, was the Chief Executive's immediate destination. The itinerary called for a 45-minute pause there tomorrow morning to allow him to make a talk from the rear platform of his train and motor down the Mississippi River bank to view channel improvement work and Works Progress Administration and Public Works Administration projects, including the Eagle Point Park.

Swinging across the northeastern corner of Iowa, he will stop again at Oelwein and Mayfield and turn up into Minnesota for a five-hour halt at St. Paul.

Officials said that while the St. Paul program was indefinite as yet, the President probably would make a speech at the State capital and motor to Minneapolis, just across the Mississippi River.

Before returning to his Hyde Park, N. Y., home a week from Saturday, the President will take his drive for another four years in the White House into Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and New York. Minnesota and Iowa complete the 11 States in which he arranged to center the campaign for more than a week.

Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied the President, as did Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., a daughter-in-law. The official party also included Marvin H. McIntyre, Presidential secretary; H. M. Kannee, his assistant; Miss M. A. Lehand, the President's personal secretary; Mrs. Malvina T. Schneider, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary; Col. E. M. Watson, military aid; Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician; George A. Fox, White House pharmacist, and Secret Service men.

Also accompanying the party were Senators Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada; Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; Eugene S. Leggett, director of the National Emergency Council; Breckenridge Long, former Ambassador to Italy; Judge and Mrs. S. E. Rosenman, of New York, and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, widow of the Senator from Nebraska and Omaha publisher.

Landon Starts Drive to Carry States in Doubt

11 Different Railroads to Be Used in Intricate Campaign of Kansan.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Oct. 8.—Gov. Alf M. Landon struck out for the Great Lakes tonight to weave a Presidential campaign trail through what his office termed the "battleground" States—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan.

Drawn by a prize of 88 electoral votes, the Republican nominee's special 10-car train headed northeast, with Chicago the first stopping point on a 2,400-mile eight-day political trek. A nationally broadcast discussion of Federal finances in Chicago tomorrow night was the first of three scheduled major addresses.

Cleveland was next on the program for a speech Monday and Detroit for Tuesday. But between these major stops and the home base of Topeka, threaded a campaign path studded with more than 30 rear platform appearances and so intricate that Landon offices said the tracks of 11 different railroads would be used "in order to reach the principal cities."

The rear-platform talks start tomorrow when the train halts at Freeport, Ill., at 7:35 a. m. (Central standard time) and Rockford, Ill., at 8:50 a. m. It is scheduled to reach Chicago at 11 a. m., and leave 12 hours later.

Signs Proclamation

Landon divided his last day in Topeka before his fourth big political tour between his office and home. At the State capitol, the Governor held a press conference, reporting "no news," and signed a proclamation naming October 11 "Gen. Pulaski's Memorial Day."

"Pulaski hated autocracies and dictatorships and the centering of power in government," Landon said of the Polish Revolutionary hero. "He believed in freedom and open opportunity and found the American cause expressive of his own yearnings."

The afternoon at the executive mansion was spent with his family and working on speeches prior to time to board his train.

The Governor wrote a letter to Arthur G. Gresham, of Indianapolis, former State commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, thanking him for a pledge of support with the words:

"Such loyal expressions as yours give me renewed confidence that victory will crown our efforts."

Landon also sent a telegram to Il Pensiero, St. Louis, Mo., congratulating Italo-Americans upon dedication of a new community hall. He said, in part:

"This project * * * represents the free enterprise, the unshackled initiative and the untrammeled spirit by which our people seek and find the finer things of life under the American system. * * * We are met with a crisis in which we must all join, regardless of ancestry, to preserve those sacred institutions and opportunities for our children and for unborn generations."

The candidate announced that his personal party on the trip would include Speaker S. C. Bloss of the Kansas House of Representatives and five Kansas editors—Charles F. Scott, publisher of the Iola Register; Fred A. Seaton, of Manhattan, State chairman of the Young Republicans; Robert J. Daubengayer, publisher of the Salina Journal; Sidney F. Harris, of the Ottawa Herald, and Charles Spencer, of the Independence Reporter.

Presidency, a chance to win one State.

"Toilers of America," Ryan said, "I implore you not to permit yourselves to be misled. Do not let yourselves be persuaded that your votes can throw the Presidential election into the House of Representatives. That cannot happen unless Mr. Lemke carries at least one State. Where is he going to find that State?"

Ryan said the charge of communism leveled at Roosevelt was "the most cruel and most unjust accusation" ever made against a Chief Executive. Among those who have linked the New Deal with communism, Father Coughlin's name was the only one mentioned.

Prof. Frankfurter, Ryan said, is "no more a Communist than is Gov. Landon, or Senator Borah or Senator Glass." Tugwell's proposals, he said, are "no stronger than the demands of Pope Pius for a more just distribution of wealth and a comprehensive organization of all the economic classes."

Hillman, he declared, "was never a Communist nor even a formally enrolled member of the Socialist Party." And he said Dubinsky, "far from having communistic sympathies * * * has consistently and successfully fought communism in the labor union of which he is the head."

Enumerates Measures.

He enumerated NRA, the AAA, the labor disputes act, the holding company act, the securities exchange act, the social security act and the undistributed earnings tax as "the principal measures upon which is based the charge of communistic tendencies."

Ryan said none of these laws even tended toward communism or socialism, and declared many of them contained principles advocated in papal pronouncements.

"They are mild installments of too-long delayed social justice," he declared.

Father Ryan said he could "understand fully how Mr. Roosevelt feels," because he himself had been denounced as a Socialist in years when "socialism was about as terrifying a designation, or epithet, as communism is today." Some prominent members of his faith, he said, called him a "dangerous radical," and some do yet, but labor leaders "have unanimously regarded me as their friend and advocate."

Would Choose Fascism.

But were he called upon to choose between fascism and communism, he said he unhesitantly would choose fascism, although he detested "both these forms of despotism and tyranny."

Urging Roosevelt's re-election as a check against communism's spread, he said alarm over communism here "is out of all proportion to the facts."

"Probably all the 'communist-minded' will vote for Browder, the Communist candidate for President," he said. "I am willing to predict that he will get less than 150,000 votes, probably less than 100,000. While I am in the forecasting mood, let me hazard the prediction that less than 2,000,000 persons will cast their ballots for Mr. Lemke."

Coughlin to Reply.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 8.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin tonight said that in his radio address Saturday he would be "forced to answer" the charges of the Right Rev. John H. Ryan, who just previously had criticized his attacks upon the New Deal.

"Either he is right and I am wrong"—the priest was interrupted by shouts of "You're right" from a crowd which filled Pittsburgh's Syria Mosque.

"Who's right?" a group called.

The radio priest stilled the crowd with an upraised hand and, without completing his sentence, continued:

"I shall leave it to the judgment of the American people following Saturday.

"He (Mgr. Ryan) has made two charges in the last three-quarters of an hour. I was detained from coming to this meeting while I listened to them.

Charges Are Listed.

"The charges are these: 'First, that Mr. Roosevelt has no communistic tendencies, and, secondly, that because Mgr. Ryan was preaching social justice before I was born, he knows more about it than I do.'

He noted that Ryan had said his "monetary remedies" were "90 per cent wrong," and added that while he appreciated the size of his audience, it was "too small" for his reply to Ryan's assertions.

"If I am wrong, I shall pass out of this picture entirely," he said, "and if I cannot prove Mgr. Ryan is wrong, I likewise pass out of the picture."

"Therefore, I am going to leave this question to two authorities—the writings of Pope Pius XI—I, too, can quote him—and I am going to leave it as a sort of letter contest to the audience next Saturday night."

Peaceful End Is Likely To Sino-Nippon Dispute

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Nanking, Oct. 8.—Prospects of a peaceful solution of the dispute between China and Japan, which for a time threatened to end in armed conflict, were brighter tonight.

"The spirit manifested by Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe, in my conversation with him today, encourages a belief that outstanding Chinese-Japanese problems may be solved without resorting to measures other than diplomatic," Generalissimo Chiank Kai-Shek, supreme power in the Nanking government, declared.

U.S. Spending Out of Control, Mills Declares

Treasury Ex-Chief Charges 'Secret' Tax Policy Hinders Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—The National Administration's fiscal policies were assailed tonight by former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills, who declared the Government had "lost control over the spending machine it has created."

Mills, addressing a dinner meeting of the Life Underwriters' Association, said:

"Either the present Administration doesn't want to stop spending or doesn't know how. My own opinion is that it has neither the will nor the ability."

After describing life insurance as "one of the most popular and widespread forms of saving," he declared the would-be saver was under "a terrific handicap," with Federal, State and local taxes taking almost 20 per cent of the national income.

Scouts Relief Claim.

"We are told," he said, "that the high cost of Government is due to relief needs. But this does not account for an increase of several hundred million dollars in the ordinary routine expenditures of the long-established departments of Government.

"Nor does it explain why the more business improves and the greater the employment, the more the Federal Government finds it necessary to spend on so-called relief and recovery.

"I have studied the budget figures. Ex-Comptroller General McCarl is right when he says that expenditures can and should be reduced by at least a billion dollars. If there were the slightest will to save, this and more could be done, and done without in any way curtailing the benefits of those entitled to relief."

Hits Secret Taxes.

A Federal tax system which, because of its reliance on indirect taxes, conceals from the mass of the people the real weight of the burden, and thus denies to the Government the brake which public opinion would otherwise apply.

Deficits financed by the manufacture of bank credit.

Thirteen billion dollars of such artificial credit already in existence.

Bank reserves largely in excess of legal requirements, inviting a further expansion of bank credit.

Extraordinarily easy money, artificially produced.

A monetary policy based upon no definite convictions or principles.

A long-delayed business recovery, ready to cloak an inflationary movement until it gathers real momentum.

"Add them all together and there would appear to be the material for a grand bonfire," he added.

"Add them all together, and the case for Federal retrenchment and balancing of the Federal budget is overwhelming."

Rebel Leaders Make Threats To Ruin Madrid

Bloody battles were reported in the rolling countryside between Santa Cruz del Retamar and Valmojado, last stand of the retreating government forces before Navalcarnero.

Overhead rebel warplanes—"blackbirds of death," the Socialists call them—blasted the way for the infantry and cavalry charges.

Heavy bombs ripped sandbagged fortifications and isolated buildings from which the government militia poured rifle volleys at their attackers.

Conflicting reports were received on the battle in the northeastern coastal sector of Spain centering around government-held Bilbao.

Radio broadcasts said 150 rebel hostages had been executed in Bilbao, and that insurgent troops fought to within five miles of the besieged city.

Loyalists Retreat.

With Loyalists at Lasnavas, Spain, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—An intense, all-night rebel bombardment blasted government defenders from Navalperal today, forcing a retreat to Las Navas, 5 miles eastward on the road to Madrid.

The new loyalist lines are little more than 30 miles from the capital on this front. From Las Navas, a dirt road leads to a fine paved highway a few miles distant, on a straight line to Madrid.

Navalperal was not able to hold out longer owing to lack of provisions and ammunition. For two days the roads out of Navalperal, east and west, were under heavy insurgent artillery fire.

Bust of Lord Kelvin, Physicist, Is Presented to Smithsonian

Is Given in Behalf of English-Speaking Union by V. A. L. Mallet, Embassy Counselor; Houghton Presides at Ceremonies.

A bronze bust of Lord Kelvin, great English physicist of the nineteenth century, was presented to the Smithsonian Institution by the English-Speaking Union at a luncheon yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

Tendered in behalf of the union by V. A. L. Mallet, recently appointed Counselor of the British Embassy here, the gift was accepted by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, Smithsonian secretary.

Alanson B. Houghton, former American Ambassador to the Court of St. James, presided at the ceremony as president of the Washington branch of the union's American organization. Dr. W. F. G. Swann, of Swarthmore, Pa., widely known English-born physicist and director of the Bartol Research Foundation of the Franklin Institute, talked on the scientific achievements of Lord Kelvin, while another tribute to the scientist was given in a message from Prof. A. H. Compton, of the University of Chicago.

The bust is the first bronze ever cast from the plaster original by the English artist, Herbert Hampton, sculptor of statues of King George V and Queen Mary.

In opening the ceremony Houghton called attention to the common ideals of the English-speaking races and stressed the importance of Lord Kelvin's contributions to the progress of peoples on both sides of the Atlantic. Houghton then introduced Dr. Fred E. Wright, home secretary of the National Academy of Sciences, who presented a formal citation of Lord Kelvin's achievements prepared by Dr. Arthur H. Compton and Dr. Henry Crew in behalf of the academy. The citation pointed out that the scientist mastered dynamics and "discovered the absolute scale of temperature, thus creating the modern science of thermometry," and that his "study of the oscillatory discharge, his invention of the mirror galvanometer and the siphon-recorder, and his mode of operation made possible the first successful submarine telegraph and incidentally created the science of electrical engineering."

Dr. W. F. G. Swann then was called upon by Houghton to express the American English-Speaking Union's tribute to Lord Kelvin, as a prelude to the formal presentation of the bust to Dr. Abbot.

In accepting the gift, Dr. Abbot mentioned that the Smithsonian was founded through the generosity of a far-seeing Englishman. "It is inspiring to reflect on the galaxy of geniuses that adorned the reign of Queen Victoria," he said. "They shine in the social, political, literary, musical and artistic realms, but especially in the domain of science. And among the sciences none had a brighter constellation of stars than the science of physics, with the outstanding names of Faraday, Maxwell, Rayleigh and, greatest of all, Lord Kelvin as the foremost one among them.

"It gives me profound satisfaction to accept from the English Speaking Union this fine bust representing so great a man. To thoughtful people who will visit the Smithsonian Institution, this bust of Lord Kelvin will recall at once the varied outstanding accomplishments of the greatest physicist of the nineteenth century, including those inventions which made possible the Atlantic cable uniting America with the mother country."

vessels with arms and munitions for Spain which call at ports of countries signatory to the pact.

Kremlin Under Pressure.

Moscow, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Kremlin, informed sources said tonight, has not yet decided to send munitions into Spain to aid the Spanish government against the Fascist insurgents.

Nevertheless, reliable informants said, the Kremlin was under considerable pressure and having difficulty restraining a wave of sympathy for Spain, which has developed during the last three months.

The government continued mass meetings of workers for donations to be sent to Spanish women and children, but in many quarters "airplanes and not apples, bombs and not butter," were demanded for the Spanish "popular front."

Soviet officials placed full blame "for the failure of the neutrality agreement" on the lack of "backbone of England and France," which officials said they hoped had been stiffened by the ultimatum.

Meanwhile, Marcelino Pasqua, first Spanish ambassador to U. S. S. R., tonight became the idol of Moscow. The Soviet citizens accorded him great ovations whenever he appeared in public.

Accompanied by high Soviet officials, he was introduced to a theater audience and given a wild ten-minute applause, after which he delivered a speech thanking the Russians for their sympathy.

Nazis Attack Ultimatum.

Berlin, Oct. 8 (AP).—The German foreign office tonight attacked the Soviet demarche in London as an attempt to save a "Comintern venture" in Spain.

A foreign office statement said the Soviet government, by throwing its weight against the Spanish Fascists, hoped "to rescue the revolutionary capital invested in Spain by the Comintern."

Thousands See Grounded Ship Battle Waves

Spectator Falls Dead, Two Women Hurt in Throng Watching Fight.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 8.—A shipwreck within a stone's throw of a famous San Francisco landmark drew thousands of persons today to the south shore of the Golden Gate, where the freighter Ohioan, wedged between two rocks, apparently was fighting a losing battle against the pounding sea.

The ship crashed onto the fog-hidden rocks while trying to grope her way through the Gate heads. Coast Guardsmen threw three lines to her from a 250-foot cliff which offers an ideal view of the sea and the rocky shore.

Policemen were called out to handle the crowds. Within full view of the wrecked ship newsboys sold papers telling the story of her plight.

Spectator Falls Dead.

Robert Dodd, 55, a spectator, fell dead of heart disease. Mrs. Elizabeth Knowles, 52, suffered a broken ankle in a fall. Miss Bessie Hines, 23, slipped 20 feet down the cliff but caught herself at the cost of a fractured ankle.

High tide came and went without budging the ship, but her crew of 42 remained aboard. Coast guardsmen reported three holds flooded and 20 feet of water in the engine room. They said the chances of salvage were slight. The crew was believed in no danger, but the lines were left up in case removal became necessary.

Lost Ketch Hunted.

Honolulu, Oct. 8 (AP).—Wireless operators throughout the mid-Pacific area listened in vain tonight for word from the stricken auxiliary ketch Margaret Payne, "lost" in the vast ocean expanse somewhere south of the Hawaiian Islands.

The Coast Guard cutter Itasca pressed a blind search in the general area where the little yacht reported its plight Saturday with a plea that its six occupants could "hold out" only three days.

Odds against rescue increased when the yacht's radio went silent. It was last heard Tuesday midnight reporting its position as unknown and its occupants unable to cope much longer with the difficulties besetting it.

Mortimer A. Sears Funeral Held Here

Funeral services for Mortimer A. Sears, 53, of Twentieth street and Florida avenue, were held at Hysong undertaking establishment at 2 p. m. yesterday, and the body was sent to Athol, Mass., Sears' native city, for burial. Last rites were conducted under the auspices of the Masonic Order.

Sears, a member of the professional staff of the General Land Office, died at his residence Tuesday night. He was a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and for several years was a mining engineer, later becoming a surveyor of mineral deposits in public land States. He had been connected with the General Land Office mineral department.

In 1906 he married Miss Marie Childress. His widow and a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Michelborough Weller, survive.

Polo Ace Contends He Will Be Hampered by Naturalization.

Charging that his Democratic opponents first brought the issue of his citizenship to the fore, attorneys for Winston Guest, internationally famous polo player and New York socialite, sought to persuade Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court yesterday their client is a natural-born citizen.

In 1934 Guest ran on the Republican ticket for State senator from Nassau County and the question of his status was brought before the election board. Their decision resulted, however, in a stalemate, Guest's attorneys declared, since the membership of the board was comprised of two Democrats and two Republicans. The polo player then brought the matter to the attention of the attorney general and he in turn referred the case to the district attorney for a decision, who upon review dropped the case. It now is being reopened by the claimant after Immigration Commissioner Daniel W. MacCormack gave an advisory opinion that he was an alien.

Guest, a tall, broad-shouldered athlete of 30, was born in Rochampton, England. His mother, Amy Phipps, of Pittsburgh, was wed to his father, Frederick Guest, in London June 28, 1905. Winston was born in May of the following year.

When Mrs. Guest and her husband separated in 1919, the mother was given custody of the child under a separate agreement. Both returned that year to the United States, where young Guest was registered at Ellis Island as an alien. This action was the result of a misapprehension of his true status, Guest maintained.

May 3, 1923, Mrs. Guest was formally repatriated, though she had never renounced her citizenship.

Emphasizing that immigration authorities have no "grudge" against Guest, Chief Assistant United States Attorney David A. Pine yesterday argued the matter is discretionary with the executive branch of the Government, and that the advisory action of a court is not warranted. He said:

"Indeed, he (Guest) is the type of man the Government should welcome to citizenship, but it believes that he is not entitled to citizenship in this manner and to grant it would set a dangerous precedent."

Counsel for the polo player countered with the claim that it is a matter for the courts to decide since Guest's future is in jeopardy. To obtain citizenship through naturalization would seriously handicap him in the political career he has undertaken, they said. They, therefore, requested the court to declare Guest a natural-born citizen since his mother was born in the United States. Failing this, they asked the court to compel immigration authorities to issue a certificate of naturalization.

First Lady Explains Girls' School Delay

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday appeared unperturbed by the delay in reconstruction of the National Training School for Girls occasioned by an order of the Budget Bureau.

At her White House press conference she explained the $100,000 appropriation was being held up until a decision is reached on the suggested consolidation of all girls' corrective institutions and the question of whether small or large dormitories are preferable.

No further action will be taken, it is understood, until the regular budget hearings, when the public welfare board will be called upon to consider a consolidation plan.

Judge Clashes With Attorney; Mistrial Ruled

Curran Acts in Reckless Driving Case After Words With Lawyer.

Climaxing one of his most hectic days on the Police Court bench since he was appointed several months ago, Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday ruled a mistrial in a reckless-driving case after clashing with the defendant's attorney over the selection of a jury.

Although the legal conflict, in the course of which Judge Curran was accused of being facetious, was between T. Edward O'Connell, defense counsel, and the judge, the mistrial resulted from the presentation of "confusing" evidence to the jury by Rice Hooe, assistant corporation counsel.

The complications arose from Judge Curran's action Wednesday in discharging and rebuking a Police Court jury after it found Morgan Glaze, 27, colored, not guilty of negligent homicide in the traffic death of Mrs. Mary Hassenfluck.

Three new warrants for the arrest of Glaze, whose car fatally injured the 79-year-old widow September 5, 1935, were sworn out late yesterday. They charge him with failing to notify the Traffic Department of a change of address, driving without a permit and driving with defective brakes.

Repercussions from the Glaze jury's dismissal began yesterday when the case of Hugh M. Alexander, charged with reckless driving, was called in Judge Curran's court.

O'Connell challenged the legality of the jury panel, arguing it would not be proper to select 12 jurors from the same panel from which 12 others had been dismissed with prejudice. Finding 12 men and women already seated in the jury box, he addressed the court:

"I want to object to his jury and say to this court that this is the first time that I have ever entered a courtroom to represent a defendant and found a jury already seated in the box waiting to try my case. It looks to me like there is a stacked deck against me."

Then followed a battle of words between judge and lawyer which amused the courtroom. After the jurist had ordered the 12 men and women from the box and instructed Clerk Charles Driscoll to "shuffle the deck," he asked O'Connell:

"Do you want to cut the cards?

"I object," replied the lawyer.

"To what?" asked the judge.

"To the facetiousness of that remark," answered O'Connell.

Although he insisted his client could not receive a fair trial under the circumstances, a new jury was seated and the trial resumed.

The issue was terminated abruptly when Judge Curran ruled a mistrial several hours later on the ground that Hooe, prosecuting his first case before a jury as assistant corporation counsel in charge of Police Court, had confused the jury by his mass of maps, charts and other graphic evidence. The case will be reassigned under a new jury.

Pulitzer Prize Winner at Library of Congress for Material.

A "friend" of Sam Houston and Andrew Jackson sat in the manuscript room of the Library of Congress yesterday, reading letters yellow with age and thumbing through musty pamphlets, ferreting out facts for his next book.

He was Marquis James, author, Pulitzer Prize winner, ghost-writer for a number of prominent contemporary figures and biographer of two of the most colorful men in American history.

"Yes, I believe I know both Houston and Jackson as well as I know anybody," he said in a characteristic drawl that reveals his Oklahoma origin.

"I consider 'em old friends. You can't live with a man for four years, as I did with Houston, figuratively speaking, and read everything about him you can lay your hands on, without getting pretty well acquainted with him. I went through about 20,000 letters and 60,000 books looking for material about him. I've examined more manuscripts than that to get acquainted with Jackson. Yes, I consider both of 'em very old and very good friends."

It was while he was writing Houston's biography that he became interested in Jackson, he said, and the former was no sooner out of the way than he started collecting data on "America's most colorful President." Now working on the second volume of this book, he has just completed a trip through the South where he went in search of more facts. In Nashville, Tenn., recently he found 2,000 letters written by (and to) John Campbell, Treasurer of the United States under Jackson. Since these throw some startling light on the entire Jacksonian Epoch, officials of the Library of Congress are now negotiating with the Campbell descendants for possession of the papers.

A loosely-hung-together man with sandy hair, massive features and brown eyes beneath bushy eyebrows, Marquis James settled back in his chair, rolled a cigarette, lighted it, and observed he had unearthed a number of new facts in looking through the Campbell papers. But he declined to reveal what they were; said only "they certainly gave a different picture of Peggy Eaton than has ever been found before, and they told me a lot of things I didn't know about Jackson."

He doubts that modern America will ever give rise to a man as colorful as Jackson, but he believes "There are many great men today, despite the fact that dueling, fights with Indians and frontiers are out of fashion.

"In the past, pioneering was a challenge to courage; it still is today—only now our leaders fight it out on frontiers that never faced our forefathers. Great men, I believe, are products of hard times. Often their worth cannot be determined until after their time."

Confident that "No matter what may happen in this country, the United States will never change its form of government because too many people here either have a stake in the country or hope they will have someday," He pointed out that "in nations where revolutions have recently taken place, the masses felt they had little to lose.

"Our country is more unstable than it was in Jackson's time," he said. "It will weather whatever may beset it now, just as it did then."

He plans to complete his Jackson biography by February, but he said he would probably "let it cool" for a few months before sending it to his publisher. Like all authors of best-sellers, Marquis James will autograph his books on the slightest provocation. But unlike most of them, he has consistently refused to be lionized or to write for motion pictures. He has never liked to go to literary teas, he admitted, and he refuses to go now. Just because he has written a couple of best sellers he sees no reason why he should become a public figure in any respect. "I don't want to help put on the show myself," he said. "I'd rather sit back and see what it looks from a 50-cent seat. You can't possibly appraise other public figures if you're trying to stay on the stage yourself."

He has turned down numerous offers to write for motion pictures, "because writing for the movies is not part of my trade, and I have enough to do that is." He hasn't yet seen the recent screen portrayal of Jackson and Peggy Eaton "because I'm not interested in seeing a Hollywood version of a novelist's version of Andrew Jackson's career," he said.

Marquis James, of Pleasantville, N. Y., who won a Pulitzer Prize on his biography of Houston and has written a best-seller on Jackson's early career, now is collecting data for a second volume on Jackson's career.

Workers to Be Allotted Small Farms in Mexico

Mexico City, Oct. 8 (AP).—Large plantations of Mexico's rich Laguna area, it was announced here today, will be split into small farms and allotted to workers Departing for Michoacan, President Lazaro Cardenas decreed that 145,000 acres of the region—richest in Mexico—be divided into farms of a maximum of approximately 350 acres.

Cardenas' intention to go ahead with the plan, under discussion for some time, aroused predictions in some sources that Mexico would be forced to import cotton from the United States within two or three years.

The government promised facilities of the farm industrial bank will be used to prevent any crop loss, but observers recalled sharp decrease in production when Yucatan and Henequen Haciendas similarly were broken up.

Dean Gets Life In Black Legion Murder Trial

Pleads Guilty in Poole's Slaying; Judge Calls Victim a Martyr.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 8.—Dayton Dean, stocky, talkative two-gun killer whose lurid disclosures on Black Legion terrorism aided the State's fight to stamp out the hooded night-riders, was dealt a life term for murder today by a circuit judge who called Dean's victim "a martyr to the cause of civil and religious liberties."

Dean had pleaded guilty to shooting Charles A. Poole, young WPA worker, on a lonely country road last May 12 on order of a Black Legion superior officer after false gossip that Poole beat his wife, an expectant mother.

Seven other Black Legion members who were convicted of first-degree murder for the Poole killing will be given mandatory life sentences tomorrow. Four convicted of second-degree murder will be sentenced Saturday.

The prejudice against certain racial and religious groups, which the Black Legion was charged with borrowing from the Ku Klux Klan, was denounced today by Judge Joseph A. Moynihan, who termed the killing of Poole "a sad commentary on our form of civilization."

"Charles Poole," the judge told Dean in a crowded courtroom, "will always remain a martyr. It is a good thing for you this crime was not committed 100 miles in either direction from the scene, or you would have paid for his life with your own."

Dean, who told the judge his only motive for testifying against his co-defendants was "to see that the organization was broken up for the good of the people," said after the sentence was pronounced:

"I am glad it's over. I hope no one else gets in the same jam."

The police inquiry started in motion by Dean's disclosures has resulted in indictment of nearly 70 persons for kidnaping, murder and arson plots, and for criminal syndicalism, the last charge based on an alleged conspiracy to seize Federal buildings and arsenals.

While Dean was appearing in court here, prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, of Wayne County (Detroit), went to Toledo, Ohio, where investigators are seeking to link a secret society with the Black Legion. Dean today said he attended two Black Legion meetings in northern Ohio last winter attended by "the most bloodthirsty crowd I ever met," but was unable to recall exact dates or locations.

Birgil Effinger, of Lima, Ohio, said by investigators here to have been national commander of the Black Legion, and 20 others, have been indicted on criminal syndicalism charges. Examinations have been postponed until October 20, because Effinger and Isaac (Pegleg) White, also indicted, still are at large.

Mediation Board Wins Court Fight

The Shopmen's Association of the Atlantic Coast Line yesterday lost in District Court an attempt to prevent the National Mediation Board from conducting and supervising an election among the carrier's employes to determine which of the workers should be chosen to deal with the management in collective bargaining.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue dismissed the request for an injunction to prevent the board from holding an election with the observation that an election two years ago had been held and that a second election had been requested by the American Federation fo Labor.

After preliminary arguments before the board it was decided that another election should be held, and it was the second election that was attacked by the association, the delegates of which now represent the shopmen in conferences with officials of the railroad.

Al Smith Says Party Platform Is Repudiated

Calls Agriculture Program 'Colossal Flop;' 4,500 Give Him Ovation.

both political parties who trusted in the honesty of the platform and in the honesty of the men that were elected upon it.

"I will speak for myself. If I thought that I was going to get the platform of Norman Thomas rather than the platform of the Democratic Party I will tell you what I would have done. I would have done something for Hoover that he didn't do for me.

"I would vote for him."

He said the 1932 platform was the best ever adopted by either major party in the history of the country. But never as far back as I can remember or as far back as I am able to read history, did I ever see so complete a repudiation of a platform in letter, in spirit, in principles and in detail."

"But no man worthy of the name," he added, "ever does the directly opposite thing to that which he promises. And yet, sad for me, sad indeed for me as a Democrat, to have to say that is exactly what my party did when it was taken over by the New Deal.

"It is not easy for me to find fault with the Democratic Party. I worked for it as no man in New York State before me for a third of a century labored for it. It is only under the severest form of provocation that I have to talk against it.

Charges Betrayal.

"I am not responsible for the sins of commission and the sins of omission on the part of the leaders of my party when they betrayed the trust of the people in the repudiation, not only of the party platform, negatively and affirmatively, but a betrayal of the fundamental principles upon which the party was constructed.

"After I leave one of these meetings and go back to New York, do not make the mistake of thinking that I go to the Republican headquarters. I have no use for it. I go among Democrats. I meet all kinds. I meet the kind that admit, freely admit, 'Yes, the platform was tossed overboard, but what is the use? We might as well go along with the party anyway.' Well, if there is anything in that theory, then we had better do away with the platforms."

"The primary functions of government are the preservation of life and property and there is something going on in the State of Pennsylvania today that cannot have the approval of the people," he said.

He said he referred to large amounts of coal that were being "bootlegged" in Pennsylvania, asserting that nothing had been done about it.

"If that happened in New York State," he continued, "there would be grounds for the impeachment of the Governor."

He said the people of the country would be called upon November 3 to make one of the most important decisions in the history of the country and asked the audience to distinguish between "bunk and facts."

"I find one class of people who are dissatisfied with the Government but say nothing about it," he said. "They probably will not vote for Mr. Roosevelt. The other group are dissatisfied and say so."

He described himself as one of the latter group, saying he considered that the "more honorable course."

"I have only in my heart charity for the small minority that found fault with me," he said, asserting that he could tell by their letters they knew little or nothing about the problems which confront the country.

He then launched into his attack on the Administration for what he termed the repudiation of the party platform.

"It was sad for me when my party was taken over by a New Deal," he said.

Draws Many Laughs.

He repeatedly drew laughs from the audience in referring to the present Administration as "the Roosevelt Party, not the Democratic Party."

"Everybody knows that the platform was thrown out the window," he said, adding that even his two grandchildren knew it.

He stated there was no plank in the platform more important than the agricultural plank, "and no group is more interested in agriculture than the housewife."

"There is a double indictment handed down against the Administration by the Supreme Court," he declared, naming them as an indictment for passing an unconstitutional law for the regulation of agriculture, and an indictment for violating States' rights.

"I don't have to tell you that when you build a house of cards and you pull the bottom card out, you know what happens."

He described the agricultural adjustment act as "a colossal flop."

"After the AAA," he continued, came the cotton control bill and the potato bill. What happened? They were withdrawn by the Administration because after what happened to the AAA, it was inevitable that they would be declared unconstitutional."

He cited prices of food to illustrate how prices had increased in the last year.

When he referred to pork chops as selling at 34 cents a pound, some one in the back of the auditorium shouted they were "45 cents."

"You must be counting in the local taxes," Smith replied.

The crowd laughed.

Another important plank in the 1932 platform, he said, was the one pledging abolition of useless Government agencies.

The audience cheered Smith frequently and there was no heckling or interference.

Due to reports that there might be a demonstration against Smith, extraordinary precautions were taken by police.

More than 500 police were on duty in the auditorium and in the immediate vicinity.

John B. Kelly, Democratic city chairman, took cognizance of the reports by issuing a statement to the newspapers urging organization Democrats to refrain from any form of demonstration or heckling.

"Let Al say what he has to say without interruption or disturbance," he said.

"If Mr. Smith is depending on Democrats for an audience," he continued, "I feel sure he could use the Little Theater."

Hamilton Confident.

Philadelphia, Oct. 8 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, national Republican chairman, said today "28,000,000 Americans will sweep the political racketeers out of work in Washington."

He told a rally of Philadelphia Republican Party workers to "get some of those WPA workers down to the polls who were forced to register Democratic."

"Don't worry about what New York is going to do," he said. "You take care of your own political dimes and the political dollars will take care of themselves. If you do your part in your own political bailiwick I promise I'll try to take care of Jim Farley for you."

Tugwell Urges RA Be Placed In Department

Million Families to Need U. S. Aid Permanently, Undersecretary Says.

By the Associated Press.

Saying Governmental assistance would be necessary "normally" for about 1,000,000 farm families of low income, Rexford G. Tugwell expressed hope yesterday that his Resettlement Administration would become a regular part of the Agriculture Department.

Tugwell is Undersecretary of Agriculture as well as chief of the Resettlement agency set up by President Roosevelt to act until next June 30. So far it has spent a total estimated by its officials at $174,000,000.

In an interview, the Resettlement chief said he had not asked "permanent status" for the Resettlement Administration because he thought it functioned best as a flexible emergency agency.

If made a part of the Agriculture Department, he added, it would be comparable in status to the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, which has directed the crop control and soil conservation programs.

Aids Needy Farmers.

Resettlement at present is engaged principally in making loans and subsistence grants to drought-stricken and other needy farmers, in constructing "demonstration" housing projects and in carrying on some community developments started by the now abandoned Subsistence Homesteads Administration.

Tugwell said the 1,000,000 low-income farm families which he estimated normally would require governmental assistance of some sort were entirely apart from depression and drought victims.

In addition to the idea of making Resettlement a regular bureau or unit of the Agriculture Department, the administrator said another possibility was that a separate new Federal agency might be created to handle a Federal farm tenant program. Resettlement could be merged with such an agency, he asserted.

Tugwell also discussed the recent promotion of Col. Philip B. Fleming, Army officer, from the position he was given in mid-August as supervisor of resettlement inspection to supervisor of all construction.

Assigned to "Quoddy."

Fleming was a deputy administrator in the Public Works Administration when that agency was established and later was assigned to the now suspended tide-harnessing project at Passamaquoddy, Me.

"I am not a technician on construction and Col. Fleming is," Tugwell said. "I have known him for some time and asked for his services when I knew he was through in Maine."

Elaborating his suggestion that Resettlement be shifted from its present independent status to the Agriculture Department, he said this would "co-ordinate activities," but added that department units had been giving "swell co-operation."

He said the shift could be made either by Congress or the President, with all present Resettlement projects continuing.

New Deal Acts Topic of Debate Of Two Leaders

McMahon and McCracken Discuss Issues Before Peace Council.

"The New Deal has abolished dollar diplomacy."

"Roosevelt is leading us into dictatorship, mounting debts and taxes and internal strife. This inevitably means war."

These two opposing views were laid before the annual banquet of the National Council for the Prevention of War last night in a debate between Brien McMahon, Assistant Attorney General, and William P. McCracken, Jr., Hoover's Assistant Secretary of Commerce. They were attempting to show peace-minded voters why they should vote for Roosevelt or Landon.

"The present President of the United States," said McMahon, "has done more to preserve the country's peace and to rid its people from the fear and possibility of war than any other individual who, in our time and generation, has sat in the White House."

He backed up this statement by a review of the results of the President's "good neighbor" policy, including the withdrawal of marines from Nicaragua and Haiti, the reciprocal trade agreements, the recent currency pact with France and England, the new neutrality policy and the steps to limit war loans and the export of munitions.

In defending the increase in our armaments, he said:

"War, like death, cometh like a thief in the night, and the strong man prepares himself so that his substance may be safe lest someone stronger than he come and take it away."

"Economic conditions at home," said McCracken in answer, "are what makes it necessary for rulers to take to conquest to divert the attention of a debt-ridden, tax-ridden people."

McCracken, who is secretary of the American Bar Association, explained that the largest unbalanced budget in peace time, the clipping of the dollar and the "vindictive" disregard of the Constitution by the President will "eventually lead to unrest at home and consequent international complications."

"I think we are facing a choice of evils," said Mrs. Lucia Amos Mead from the floor. "Both will probably bring us increased armaments." She said she was voting for Roosevelt, but the straight Republican ticket in Massachusetts.

Torso Is Believed That of Missing Bay State Widow

By the United Press.

Boston, Oct. 8.—Police tonight announced discovery of new evidence which, they said, indicated that the woman whose hacked-off legs were found in Boston Harbor was Mrs. Grace Asquith, 41, Weymouth widow, missing for three weeks.

At the same time, it was announced that Mrs. Asquith's fiance, a World War veteran, was sought for questioning. Police said he too had been reported missing for three weeks.

Evidence included a Boston newspaper, dated July 12, 1936, and blood-stained sheets. One of the victim's legs, found floating in the harbor Monday, was wrapped in a Boston newspaper, also dated July 12. The newspaper and sheets were found in Mrs. Asquith's South Shore cottage.

The decription of Mrs. Asquith corresponds almost precisely with that of the harbor victim, whose head and torso still are missing, investigators revealed.

THE POST carried MORE real estate display advertising in September than all four other Washington Newspapers COMBINED!

No question as to which newspaper sells houses! Month after month, The Washington Post carries more real estate display advertising than any other newspaper, not only in Washington, but in all America. And in September The Washington Post was entrusted with more of this advertising than all four other Washington papers combined.

Families which have just bought a house are certainly the most logical of prospects for everything that goes into that house. Furniture, household appliances, rugs, linens, fixtures, can all be sold most readily to these new home owners. The Washington Post, which sells them the house, is the paper which can sell them the things that change that house into a home.

Changes cost a lot of money, and besides, why rock the boat? On the other hand, progress and improvement come only through changes, costly as they are. Buick has had a highly successful 1936 year. Plenty of people said the car couldn't be improved. But Buick men had some ideas. To put them into effect would cost plenty. Should they change, or shouldn't they? Buick had to decide—and did, to the tune of some $14,500,000. So

Dealer Seized In Nation-Wide Book-Theft Plot

Cincinnatian Is Held After Another Confesses He Robbed Libraries

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—A Nation-wide hunt for books stolen from the Congressional and public libraries resulted today in the arrest of William C. Smith, a Cincinnati book dealer who specialized in volumes on early American history.

The grand jury, acting quickly after the case was laid before Prosecutor Louis J. Schneider, returned three secret indictments charging Smith. January 23, received 23 books stolen from the Library of Congress in Washington; September 16, received four books belonging to the Cleveland Public Library, and September 19 received six stolen from the Olean, N. Y., public library.

Smith provided $8,000 bond.

Theft Confessed.

Schneider said the indictments were the result of a confession by Stanley Wemyss, 32, alias William Hilderwald, who admitted thefts of books from libraries in many cities.

"According to Wemyss' story," Schneider said, "he must have stolen in the course of four or five years between $200,000 and $300,000 worth of books."

Supplied with a list of stolen books prepared by Wemyss, sheriff's deputies and Federal agents raided the Smith Book Store in an effort to find stolen books.

Schneider gave credit for the arrest to G. William Berquist, special investigator for the New York Public Library. Berquist brought Wemyss to Cincinnati this week, informing Schneider that Wemyss was arrested last September when seen removing three pamphlets valued at $300 from the Newark, N. J., Library.

Placed on Probation.

Expressing repentance, Wemyss was placed on probation, the prosecutor said, when he promised to help "right the wrong" by co-operating with authorities in breaking up the book-stealing ring.

Schneider charged Smith paid Wemyss $237 for the 23 Congressional Library books and then listed them in a catalogue he published at prices totaling $1,137.

He said Smith would be charged with receiving stolen property, conviction on which would subject him to a sentence of one to seven years' imprisonment.

Among the books stolen from the Congressional Library were volumes printed more than a century ago.

Official Is Silent.

Martin A. Roberts, superintendent of the reading room of the Library of Congress, said last night investigation of the theft of the books was being handled by the Department of Justice and that he could not comment about it.

Drivel and Rot, Is Hull's Reply To Culkin Dare

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight branded as "drivel and rot" a challenge of Representative Francis D. Culkin (Republican), New York, to reveal the terms of a treaty Culkin said was pending between the United States and Great Britain.

Culkin, assistant director of the farm division of the Republican National Committee, hurled the challenge last night just before Hull spoke at Minneapolis.

"If I were national chairman of a party and I had a man in my employ who made such false representations as Representative Culkin," Hull said in an interview, "I'd fire him.

"Representative Culkin has charged that our trade treaties have injured the farmers. My answer to that is this: If any farmer is not better satisfied now under the existing treaties, than he was several years ago, I say let him go ahead and listen to that sort of drivel and rot."

Commenting on the effect the treaties had made on the price and production of commodities in the country, Hull said:

"The price of cheese, for example, Cheddar cheese in particular is higher now than at any time since the Hoover panic started. The production of cheese has shown tremendous increases in just recent months."

Funeral Today For Mrs. Brady, Lincoln Friend

Funeral services for Mrs. Ada Ford Brady, 83, who, as a child, sat upon the knee of President Abraham Lincoln, will be held at St. Ann's Church, Wisconsin avenue and Yuma street northwest, at 10 a. m. today. Burial will be private.

Mrs. Brady, daughter of Thomas Ford, a pre-Civil War Governor of Ohio, died late Wednesday after a brief illness. She was the widow of Eugene D. F. Brady, a prominent attorney here.

Born in Ohio in 1853, Mrs. Brady was brought to Washington by her father when he retired from the governorship. She was then only 9 years old and frequently she went to the White House with Gov. Ford, a close friend of President Lincoln, during the Civil War.

Mrs. Brady, whose memory remained keen until her death, often recounted the stirring days of the war. She recalled the night Lincoln was assassinated, for she was downtown at another theater at the time.

A graduate of Georgetown Convent, she lived in Washington for 72 years.

Surviving Mrs. Brady are a son, Col. Eugene D. F. Brady, O. R. C., and three grandsons, Maurice K. Brady, John B. Brady and Lieut. Parke H. Brady, U. S. N.

Varied Throng Visits Historic Va. Dog Auction

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 8.—Overalled hunters from as far as the Blue Ridge Mountains, aged colored men who had once been slaves to the white man, young field hands and ordinary "city slickers" rubbed shoulders here today as the city staged its tenth and most successful re-enactment of the 238-year-old dog mart under a brilliant sun and on a surface of brown October leaves in historic City Park.

Nat Kinsey, the town's premier auctioneer for 30 years, bedecked in a high beaver hat, a frock coat and a crimson necktie, with a richly colored zinnia in his buttonhole, stole the show this afternoon with his homespun English as he blared and bellowed, pulled and pleaded, exhorted and exclaimed until he got some fancy prices for the numerous dogs of many breeds that passed through his hands.

Glamorous Nat, who had his picture taken more than 100 times, opened the show with the explanation that within an hour no more than 4,000 lies would be told. Then he began his picturesque lingo, that goes, "Beat 'em! Bottom! Beat 'em! Bottom! What am I bid? Going! Going! Gone! Sold! Bring up the next one!" and so on for each dog offered.

A lad clutching a long-eared dog, the breed he didn't know, explained the parentage to the crowd by saying that the dog's mama and papa were "turkey dogs."

From early morning, when the first of the farmers arrived from the surrounding hill sides in buggies and wagons until late afternoon the city park was crowded. The audience was made up of all types, ranging from Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the District of Columbia Board of Commissioners, to the hired boy's assistant helper. Stately women gazed through lorgnettes while uniformed chauffeurs wished it was all over. There were barefoot boys and mountaineers in flopping hats. Others were in hunting costumes of brilliant red.

Joseph L. Rotella, of Ellison, Va., a school teacher who raises dogs as a pastime, carried off the silver cup in the hunting class. His entry, an English setter with the lyrical name of "Melrose Blue Pal," was the winner.

Sam Ford, a 75-year-old colored man who says he remembers when the Civil War ended, blew himself red in the face to win the fox horn blowing contest, while Andrew Jackson, a colored pal of Ford's looked on. Andrew had arrived early, but had forgotten his horn. Sam said he had soaked his, product of a Texas longhorn, in water "to make it sound good."

Spinsters' Home Foreclosure Is Necessary, HOLC Explains

Sisters Made No Payment on Interest or Principal of 1933 and Their Problems Were Hopeless, Statement Says.

While the Misses Colt, Katherine Gideon and Alice Ely accepted sympathy of friends on their impending eviction, the Home Owners Loan Corporation yesterday issued a statement explaining why foreclosure on their Chevy Chase home was ordered.

The spinster sisters, who have lived in the 15-room house at 7 West Kirke street since 1907, must give up the picturesque residence in less than a month unless aid comes from some unexpected source.

Meanwhile, the Baltimore regional office of the HOLC announced "the utter hopelessnes of the problems facing the Misses Colt" made foreclosure a necessity. The statement was released at Federal headquarters here. It said:

"The loan on the property of the Misses Katherine and Alice Colt, at 7 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md., was one of the first 200 of nearly 16,000 made in Maryland. It dates from the day when the emergency was at its peak and when it was necessary to make many loans to forestall an avalanche of foreclosures, and extend the relief authorized by law. Our original loan on this property was approximately $9,500. From November 2, 1933, the date the loan was closed, to the date of foreclosure, there had been no payment made on interest or principal, nor had any tax payments ever been made.

"The Misses Colt also applied for a sizable loan to recondition their property, but an appraisal and inspection, and an investigation of the facts in the case made it apparent that such an additional advance was ineligible, and they were so advised. At no time was there any promise that a reconditioning loan would be made.

"It was only after a thorough and most sympathetic investigation had established beyond any doubt in the minds of the officials who reviewed this case the utter hopelessness of the problems facing the Misses Colt that foreclosure was authorized."

Gann Will Leaves Estate to Widow

Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, sister of former Vice President Charles Curtis, of Kansas, was named sole beneficiary of the estate of her husband, Edward Everett Gann, Washington lawyer, who died suddenly at his Macomb street home October 2, it was shown in District Court yesterday when his will was filed.

No estimate of the value of the estate was attached to the will and no idea of the estate's value will be known until a petition for its probate is filed.

Slayer Is Cleared Of Sheads Murder

Norman Wesley Robinson, colored, 27, confessed slayer of Mrs. Florence Goodwin, 43-year-old Government typist, definitely was cleared of any complicity in the 1934 murder of Mrs. Mary V. Sheads yesterday by police.

Robinson was held for grand jury action several weeks ago for the murder of Mrs. Goodwin.

A Blow To Charity.

The action of the late Jesse I. Straus in revoking all charitable bequests because of increases in estate taxes is the more significant because of his universally respected record as a public servant and philanthropist. At the present time the combined Federal and New York State taxes on an estate of $1,000,000 amount to 22 per cent. A tax of 52 per cent is levied upon an estate of $10,000,000, with progressive rate increases up to 72 per cent for estates of $150,000,000 and over.

Obviously the wealthy individual confronted by virtually confiscatory taxes will be disposed to reduce his contributions to charity as the amount available for transmission to his dependents declines. Furthermore, as Mr. Straus points out, with evident reference to his own position as a large owner of department store stocks, "undue hardship and financial sacrifice and loss" may result from the "untimely sale and liquidation of assets of estates" to provide for the payment of taxes.

The growing burden of estate taxation not only affects the disposition of bequeathed property, but has a profound influence upon the attitude of the individual toward saving and the character of his investments. High taxes, both upon income and estates, tend to discourage the process of wealth accumulation and to divert savings into new channels. Men of large fortunes are also inclined to shift their holdings to easily liquidated assets in anticipation of payment of heavy estate duties instead of putting capital in new industries from which it could often only be withdrawn at a great sacrifice.

The shadow side of a "share-the-wealth" movement is curtailment or elimination of those generous endowments for education, research, public health, recreation and cultural development which have come to be associated with the names of so many of America's rich men. As a result many public activities heretofore financed by privately endowed institutions will in the future have to be dropped, or else paid for by taxpayers, rich and poor alike. In other words, the revenues derived from excessively heavy levies upon estates are not a net gain to the Treasury.

Under the conditions foreshadowed the State will decide how the surplus shall be spent, and the interests of organized lobbies will be substituted for the discrimination of the individual. Whether the public will benefit materially from the shift of responsibility is a moot question.

An Enlightened Attitude.

Complete indorsement of Dr. Ruhland's public health program by the District Medical Society is gratifying to every one who is working toward that community objective. Apparently there is not a dissenting voice in the entire city so far as this part of the 1938 budget estimates is concerned. This impressive community demand for more adequate public health measures should not be lost upon the Federal Budget Bureau or Congress.

At no time did the Medical Society adopt an attitude of positive opposition to Dr. Ruhland's plan to build two health centers in Washington. The society's emphasis upon an alternative suggestion to extend the services of existing institutions was based on a misunderstanding. Since the entire situation has been analyzed by Dr. Ruhland and the officers of the society there is complete accord upon the urgent need for new central clinics where more adequate treatment can be given to individuals unable to pay private physicians.

Some question was raised as to the advisability of spending money on buildings when actual treatment of afflicted persons and the prevention of contagious diseases are so urgent. But the Health Department's need for more space is so acute, and the present method of operating from a single center is so inefficient, that new clinics are considered essential to start the program of improved public health service on a proper basis. That viewpoint is difficult to refute.

Private doctors may well take an active part in this effort to minimize sickness, contagion and prevent unnecessary deaths. For a high mortality rate and inadequate medical treatment for any group affect the entire community. The struggle against disease will be a losing fight unless the benefits of medical science can be made available where they are needed most. In taking this view the Medical Society is not only rendering a community service; it is also promoting the best interests of the patients which its members serve.

The West Coast Labor Crisis.

In less than a week, at midnight on October 15, existing agreements between shipowners and marine unions on the Pacific Coast will terminate. A virtual stoppage of shipping business as a result of current disputes between the two parties will then ensue, unless averted by some eleventh-hour settlement. The seriousness of the situation is indicated by the preparations of Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, to fly again to San Francisco in a further effort to mediate this dangerous controversy.

The marine industrial problem on the Pacific Coast, which has continued to simmer since the San Francisco general strike of 1934, throws into relief the potential importance of the newly created Maritime Commission, established under the merchant marine act of 1936.

After months of delay, three members of this commission, under the chairmanship of Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, were named by the President on September 23. Two vacancies, for one of which Assistant Secretary McGrady is strongly supported, unfortunately remain unfilled. The President's apparent intention to hold up these appointments until after the election is seemingly entirely agreeable to the marine unions on the West Coast, now holding the whip hand over the employers in no uncertain manner.

The Maritime Commission, when the Administration finally gets around to completing its organization, will have very considerable powers for meeting just such a crisis as is now developing across the continent. In addition to its authorization to investigate working conditions the new Federal authority is empowered to set standards in this field on vessels receiving operating differential subsidies, and on Government-built vessels chartered to private companies. The description of the Maritime Commission as "an I. C. C. for the merchant marine" gives an idea of its potential utility. But the inexcusable delay in establishing the commission is causing it to be relatively impotent at the present juncture.

Apportionment of blame for the present labor crisis in West Coast shipping circles is difficult at this distance, and is in any case of secondary importance at the moment. So far as disputes affecting the longshoremen go, both parties were blamed by Judge M. C. Sloss, of San Francisco, in a statement which he made in his capacity of arbitrator last April. But while he then charged the employers with "considerable delay" in observing arbitral awards he simultaneously indicted the union for having in two important issues "consistently and repeatedly disregarded the awards of the arbitrator."

The present controversies affect unions other than that of the longshoremen, whose grievances led to the San Francisco general strike of 1934, and it is with these other marine unions that compromise proposals are now seemingly making least headway. That situation is the more disturbing because the Coast Committee for the Shipowners, representing the interests of the operators, has gone to heretofore unprecedented lengths in order to secure an accord.

Pointing out that during the two years of the existing agreements there have been "more than 450 unlawful strikes and stoppages of work," this committee has recently been bombarding the newly created Maritime Commission with appeals for intervention before the October 15 deadline. The questions of union recognition and collective bargaining are not involved, as these rights have already been won by the employes. What the shipowners ask, in the words of a telegram of September 29, is:

> Entrance into this situation of a branch of the Federal Government which we hope is clothed with the fullest authority not only to investigate and determine the facts but to cause proper labor agreements to be entered into by both parties and, what is more important still, such continuing jurisdiction over such agreements as will result in their proper enforcement.

The willingness of the shipowners to accept any results of arbitration, provided only that the unions do likewise, is indication of the totally unnecessary character of the serious disturbances threatened a week hence. Then present agreements expire, unless the marine unions agree to authoritative arbitration of such matters in dispute as are not amenable to direct negotiations.

It is now well over three months since the law creating the Maritime Commission was passed by Congress. If that still incomplete agency proves unable to be of service in the difficulties now culminating on the West Coast, the blame will focus on administrative delay in launching the agency.

They Are Not Colonies.

At their recent party congress, the British Conservatives took a strong stand in opposition to the transfer of any mandates held by Great Britain. "What we have we hold," they informed Premier Baldwin.

Implicit in this attitude is the assumption that mandated areas are at bottom only colonies under another name. But if the British Tories take time to follow the current deliberations of the League Mandates Commission they will discover that there is a real difference between the status of the two.

Had disorders like those now current in Palestine broken out in British Honduras, or any other non-mandatory part of the British Empire, they would have been ignored at Geneva. But the League is not ignoring the Palestine disturbances.

On the contrary, the Mandates Commission is subjecting the British report regarding its administration of the Palestinian mandate to the closest scrutiny, with individual members sharply critical of what clearly seems a failure on the part of the authorities to preserve order. It is clear that the commission has no intention of permitting mistakes made by Great Britain or any other mandatory power to go unremarked.

In a very real sense a mandate is a trust and its fulfillment is an obligation of honor. As watchdog of the rights of peoples living in a mandated area, and of the observance of the pledges given by the mandatory power to those peoples, the League of Nations has performed and is performing a difficult task with courage and fidelity.

The Russian Threat.

Russia's dramatic ultimatum at London again throws into sharp focus that underlying clash of interests and ideologies which is threatening to destroy the peace of Europe. It raises anew the always latent specter of a war between fascism and communism, with Spain as the immediate, and all Europe as the ultimate, battlefield.

Moscow's warning is clear. Unless the Fascist states refrain from aiding the rebels, Russia will no longer regard itself as bound by the hands-off agreement but will feel free to supply the Madrid government with the arms and ammunition it needs to beat off the rebel attack.

It is not surprising that this action has caused a very violent fluttering in the diplomatic dovecotes. For the charges made by Russia are impossible to deny. They were previously made by the Spanish foreign minister at Geneva. And they find plenty of substantiation in neutral quarters. There appears to be no doubt that the Spanish rebels have been plentifully supplied with arms sent through Portugal, presumably from Germany and Italy. The Russians, therefore, have a real case when they demand that the "hands off" agreement be lived up to by all the signatories or scrapped altogether. At present it tends to constitute a one-sided blockade of the loyalists.

It is more than probable, however, that Russia would not have served this warning were it not for the fact that the rebels are now almost at the gates of Madrid. In other words Russia's move springs from the growing probability that a Fascist government will arise in Spain, one, moreover, that would owe its very existence to support received from Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy.

Such a development Russia cannot view without concern, either as a nation or as the fountainhead of a philosophy of government against which the Nazi regime has declared a holy war. Anything that tends to strengthen fascism in Europe is, in Moscow's view, a danger to Russia. Conversely anything which tends to weaken fascism and destroy its prestige—and that would be a result of the defeat of the Spanish rebels—increases Russia's security.

It was precisely with the idea of preventing a head-on clash between the rival dictatorships that France proposed the "hands off" agreement early in the Spanish civil war. This was a self-denying move, since the French government clearly had the right to supply arms to the duly-constituted authorities at Madrid while no nation had any right to give aid or comfort to the rebels. But M. Blum, backed by the British, was prepared to make this sacrifice in the interests of European peace.

The immediate result of Russia's forthright action is to place France and Great Britain in a very difficult position. Again is demonstrated the difficult position of democracy when ground between the upper and nether millstones of antagonistic dictatorships.

Worth Worrying About.

From the New York Post.

A writer in that determined little publication that knows what it wants, the Journal of Calendar Reform, points out that arranging a sensible calendar on the planet Jupiter is even more difficult than here on earth. For instance:

"Not only are there 10,500 days in the Jovian year, but if the equatorial acceleration in the rotation period, which we observe in the outer layers of its atmosphere, extends down to the layer on which the imaginary Jovians might be supposed to live, the number of days in the year varies with the latitude, and at the equator might be fully 90 days greater than in high north and south latitudes."

If we understand this correctly—and we're anything but certain that we do—it might be three months into 1937 at Jupiter's North Pole and still New Year's eve, 1936, down in Jupiter's Peru.

Come to think of it, that's probably why there aren't any inhabitants on Jupiter. Probably killed each other off arguing about calendar reform.

Religion For Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of October 5 appears a letter captioned "Germany and Russia," by C. S. Covington. In this letter Mr. Covington says, "Indeed, there is not much difference between communism and naziism," and goes on to try to prove the trut' of the assertion.

was the principal of a large public school for years and found out that object lessons are a wonderful help in conveying the truth to the mind. I am convinced that if Mr. Covington would go with me to Cologne Cathedral (Roman Catholic) in Cologne, Germany, and to the Emperor William Memorial Church (Lutheran) in Berlin, Germany, and then go with me to St. Isaac's Cathedral in Leningrad, Russia, he would understand, instantly, from the evidence before his eyes, that there is a tremendous difference between communism and naziism, especially in the religious field.

The Cologne Cathedral and the Emperor William Memorial Church are still sending out the Christ Child's loving, consoling message of salvation to penitent, sorrowing human hearts, while once proud St. Isaac's Cathedral, for years a center of Greek Catholicism, has met with the ironic doom of having an anti-religious museum housed under its gilded dome and being made the center of anti-religious propaganda, having for its object the destruction of all belief in God.

In the light of such facts as these, how any one can think that there is but little difference between communism and naziism is a mystery to me.

Mr. Fruitnight's Troubles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I enjoyed your amusing editorial on "The Ordeal of Mr. Fruitnight" in The Post of October 8. But having read the news story on which your comment was based, I cannot refrain from observing that you seem to have missed the most startling aspect of the exhibition.

In reporting on Mr. Fruitnight's baby show the New York Times observed that "when the show opened 4,000 (babies) in the arms of 3,997 expectant mothers—for there were three sets of twins—craved admittance and sympathetic judgment."

Surely England cannot be in any danger of race suicide when 4,000 babies, presumably none of them over a year old, are brought for judgment "in the arms of 3,997 expectant mothers." MALTHUS.

Did Grant Burn Houses?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter your paper carries this morning from Lucy S. Stewart, secretary of the Society for Correct Civil War Information, Evanston, Ill., we read:

"Grant makes it clear that he did not order the burning of houses. In Serial volume 71 of the Official Record of the War of the Rebellion, page 329, Grant says: 'I do not mean that houses should be burned, but all provisions and stock should be removed, and the people notified to move out.'"

Will the secretary of the Society for Correct Civil War Information kindly tell us through the medium of The Post why Grant gave the order for the people to vacate the houses if he did not intend the latter should be burned?

It looks to me as though the secretary can only justify her hero by way of Lincoln's famous exclamation: "I wish all my generals drank Grant's brand of whisky."

Turning On Red.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Elimination of the right hand turn on all red lights would go a long way toward making streets safe for the pedestrian. As some intersections are regulated now, pedestrians have no right of way against a vehicle approaching on a red light. The red light originally stood for a stop sign to all cars, but under these conditions it reacts to the disadvantage of people who wish to cross the street in safety.

Time after time pedestrians have been trapped between curb and curb by cars coming from opposite streets on red lights. Is it any wonder traffic director calls them "jaywalkers." It's this feature of the traffic regulations that creates the very thing he wishes to get rid of. There's only one way to prevent accidents and that is to prevent them by making it safe for the pedestrian to use all our streets.

FREDERIC G. FROST.

Alfred Tennyson.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In glancing over the William Lyon Phelps daily contribution on literature in The Post, my eye fell on, "Tennyson did not have a great mind; he did not have a very original mind; he did not have a very interesting mind." The writer then quotes Carlyle's words: "Tennyson means what he says, poor fellow!" But Carlyle is one who is "passing out," and Tennyson is with us and will be with us as long as our literature lasts.

The man who could write "In Memoriam" cannot be said to be wanting in either mind or originality. Like some picture by a great master, we turn to this monumental work of Alfred Tennyson's, to see in it at each reading something new. In "Locksley Hall" there are both quotable things for all time and prophetic glimpses. In the "Princess" there is humor and pathos mingled as few poems have ever combined them. In "Idylls of the King," Tennyson has given to the world the finest exemplification of how to use myth for moral purposes. If Tennyson could live in perfect harmony with his wife for 42 years, that contrasts with the life of Mrs. Jane Welsh Carlyle, as she gives it. In fact, I prefer to take the judgment of another critic who is with common consent regarded as our best authority on poetry.

Edgar Allen Poe says of Tennyson in his lecture on "The Poetic Principle:" "I regard Alfred Tennyson as the noblest poet that ever lived. I call him and think him the noblest of poets, not because the impressions he produces are at all times the most profound; but because it is at all times the most ethereal, in other words, the most elevating and most pure."

Maybe Mr. Phelps was speaking of H. W. Longfellow when he wrote "Alfred Tennyson." In that case, he would have been perfectly correct. J. O. KNOTT.
Washington, Oct. 6.

Subsistence Homesteads?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It doesn't require a profound knowledge of political economy to foresee the fatal result of making millions of people a public charge by dole, or otherwise, instead of helping them to be self-supporting, either in private industry or on the land. If industry is not able to absorb these millions, then they should be made to be self-supporting by tilling the soil, and Government assistance should be in this direction.

Once begin to feed the individual on Government pap and in a short time it will be almost impossible to make him earn his living by his own efforts. This is a great danger in the present situation under the so-called New Deal. No such arrangement can prove a success in the long run.

The Government, under pressure, has established a standard of living for a certain class—a standard which common sense shows cannot be maintained without impairing the credit of the Government. Yet millions are practically demanding this impossible thing and intend to vote for it in the coming election. Patriotism and the general welfare of the country are of little concern to them. The end in such a case can easily be seen. Wise statesmanship would seek ways to revive industry to prevent catastrophe.

Business activity must be restored and extended if present conditions are to be overcome. A system of public charity on a huge scale will not produce the result desired.

Citizens who want our Government to be that of a free and independent people and not a pawn to a political group, should awaken to the seriousness of the situation and unite at the polls in one solid phalanx in bringing to an end this un-American scheme, the goal of which cannot be other than Fascism or some other form of government abhorrent to all lovers of liberty.

The 1936 Literary Digest Poll.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Esteeming the Literary Digest as a dependable and worthy publication, I have been likewise impressed during recent years with the findings in its Nation-wide polls as a means of forecasting subsequent election results. This year in its Presidential poll thus far published, the figures presented are so widely at variance with the opinions of trained political observers and the results of similar polls being widely taken as to have prompted the writer to make a more or less close study of the pending Digest poll. As a result a major discrepancy in this poll is noted, which in my opinion largely nullifies its value for forecasting purposes. Here are the facts simply stated:

Under the caption "Half-million Votes in Digest Poll," the current issue of the Literary Digest presents a tabulation which shows 'Landon leads in 13, Roosevelt in 8 of 21 States represented." "The total vote soars to 503,509," the Digest explains, "with Landon getting 293,972 ballots; Roosevelt, 185,495; Lemke 19,632."

Analyzing this Digest tabulation, we find that in the 1932 election Roosevelt carried 19 of the 21 States here cited. Hoover carried 2, Maine and Pennsylvania. According to the 1933 World Almanac, Roosevelt, in these 21 States, received a total vote in 1932 of 13,140,078, as against 9,120,599 cast for Hoover. That fact is established. Thus, in making deductions based on prospective voting changes in 1936, as against 1932, from one major party to the other, the Digest poll should reflect the fact that there were more Democratic votes cast in 1932 than Republican. It does nothing of the kind.

According to the Digest poll, the following numbers voting Republican in 1932 will cast their ballots in 1936, as follows: Landon, 215,298; Roosevelt, 28,149; and Lemke, 3,790. Thus this Digest cross-section of voting sentiment shows that of this poll 247,237 voted Republican in 1932. According to the same tabulation the following numbers voting Democratic in 1932 will cast their vote in 1936 as follows: Roosevelt, 138,217; Landon, 53,071; Lemke, 12,993, or a total of 204,281.

Thus it will be noted, according to the Digest figures, that there were in these straw votes cited, 42,956 more Republican votes cast in 1932 than there were Democratic votes. Of course, nothing like this happened. As a matter of fact, Roosevelt, in 1932, received approximately 6 out of every 10 votes cast. The failure of the Digest poll to come anywhere near reflecting this fact strikes me as a fatal fault in the entire tabulation.

What's Your Hurry?

The one thing that reconciles Adam to living outside of Eden is the job. I honestly believe the old boy would be unhappy if he wasn't working. It may even be that work is as necessary to him as fleas are to a dog.

It is rather curious that this should be true in a topsy-turvy world where millions of people worry themselves sick with work while other millions worry themselves sick because of the lack of paying labor. But true it is.

And it may be that the reason the world is topsy-turvy is not because Adam has been kept busy with his job, but because he hasn't gone about it in the right way. Adam has been a young man in a hurry. There are strong teeth in the saw, "More haste, less speed."

But this is not going to be a lecture on economics, though the lecture seethes within. It is a parable of a man who has led a fairly busy life and suddenly wakes up to the fact that there isn't so darned much of it left.

Casual Smith arose a few mornings ago entirely without pep. He had no desire to be up and doing. On the contrary he thanked heaven that he didn't have a thing of importance to do; not even a job to superintend, for Eph, the handyman, was taking a day off.

He dressed in leisurely fashion; went outdoors; looked at the meter on the water tank; and, though there was no pressing need, thought he might as well get the engine ready to start. So he gave it gas and water after he had checked the oil, and, because he had all the time in the world, decided to clean the spark plug, whether it needed cleaning or not. It needed it. He gave it a thorough cleaning. Then he oiled the jack, started the engine, put on the belt, and let 'er go. After which, still in leisurely fashion, and with no urgent need, he wheeled wood to the kitchen, filled a low spot on his road with gravel, and worked in the garden until noon, with time off to chat with a visiting neighbor and to exchange a few pleasantries with the postman.

At lunch it occurred to him that he had done a surprising amount of work with comparatively little effort. This was because, he decided, he had been working with time instead of against it. The little matter of the spark plug proved that much. If he had been in a hurry he would have cranked the engine until his head ached, and would have had to clean the plug at last. And he might have been brusque with his neighbor and short with the postman.

That, he concluded, was the trouble with a lot of drivers. They are forever trying to beat Time—and Time refuses to be beaten. They try to take Time by the forelock, and instead Time has them by the hair. They do their best to kill Time and instead they kill Courtesy and Kindness. Ever so many otherwise good citizens leave their manners behind them when they enter a car. Young Rabbit Haste never learned how to be polite; never had a moment to spare to think of others.

Here was an instance. They had dashed into the water, made a lot of noise, dashed out again, gulped their food, thrown the leavings around, jumped into their car and dashed off again as though the de'il were after them; as, indeed, he might well be.

But if they had taken time to look around they would not have defiled the beauties of the place; they would have taken time to dispose of the debris; to bundle it up and carry it away with them, perhaps. And time was there for the taking, if they had but known it.

The day had been a revelation to Casual Smith. He had been seeing things in a new light. Old things had been taking on a new aspect. Weeding, for instance, hadn't been just weeding. He had had time to look at the things he plucked. Sometimes they were of the same family as the vegetables he had sown; little sisters of the carrot, for example, seeking the protection of their powerful man-favored brother. Even if it didn't happen to be so, it was pleasant to think it so. For a man who had admittedly lacked pep he had assuredly known an awareness, an aliveness, that was remarkable.

And, looking back on a long life, Casual realized that hurry had always been a habit rather than a necessity; and it grieved him to think there was so much more time back of him than there was ahead of him. There is so much one may do in time if one but realizes its presence.

That, of course, was the milk in the cocoanut. With the exception of the desperate or the despairing, no man is prodigal with the last of a slender hoard. This is true of time as well as of money. Age tastes the minutes while youth gulps the days.

The one great lesson one learns in life is that there is no need of worry, no matter what the let-us-then-be-up-and-doing prodders tell you. The speeder and the slowpoke eventually arrive at the same filling station, and sometimes meet there.

Leisure is a great finder of short cuts. Time is always valuable, but the man in a hurry never has it. The one way to enjoy time is to take plenty of it. The one way to save time is to use a lot of it.

Aesop got his facts mixed in the fable of the Hare and the Tortoise and consequently missed the point. The point was that the tortoise was already there when the hare got back. He neither had to run nor ride.

It is the man who has plenty of time who lets his head save his heels. GRIF ALEXANDER.

Mencken's About-Face.

This has been a pretty grim campaign, but it can't be said that Henry Mencken has failed us in a dark hour. For years we have looked to Mr. Mencken for our laughs and, though there was a savage quality in his humor, he lightened the curse of prohibition and even found nonsense in the solemn brutality of the Borgias of the Methodist Board of Prohibition and Public Morals.

Now we discover Mr. Mencken staggering down the street under of an enormous Landon banner, a sun-flower in his lapel as big as a four-passenger omelette, a white ribbon on his sleeve and Mabel Walker Willebrandt on his arm. Mr. Mencken has come out for Mr. Landon and, though he attempts to make certain reservations, there is no such things as a little bit of Landon. You take all of him or you let him alone, and when Mr. Mencken takes the gentleman from Kansas he must also take prohibition and even Herbert Hoover whom he once denounced as a fat Coolidge.

• • • •

It would be hard for any humorist to conceive a more hilarious scene, but then, Mr. Mencken is a master and when he sets out to be funny we don't expect anyone to top his gags. Al Smith and Herbert campaigning in the same holy cause; Al Smith on the same team with Bill White, of Kansas, who once accused him of political connivance at vice; Al Smith singing out of the same hymnbook with William Randolph Hearst, of whom he once said, "I know the color of his liver and it is white"—all this is highly ludicrous and a relief from the fury of the compaign. But Mr. Mencken was no politician and has never been under that pressure which makes for those political revisions of principle which always made politicians contemptible to him.

Father Coughlin, born of that stock which long cried persecution and fought for religious freedom, co-operating with the remnants of the Ku Klux Klan and talking anti-Semitism, is a weird figure in the parade of nightmare creatures of the current fight. But we had no background on Coughlin and as far as the man himself is concerned, his present is not inconsistent with his past, for he didn't have any previous political existence.

Mr. Mencken, however, was committed against everything that Mr. Landon represents from the bumbling pomposity and dumb arrogance of the Old Deal to honorary college degrees and lodge buttons. He was not so much a crusader as a mischievous brat of the whole American neighborhood. A crusader does his enemies the honor of taking them seriously and fighting them with earnest mirthlessness, but Henry Mencken's method was to kick them in the pants when they were bent over tying their shoe and they were always tying their shoe.

• • • •

Nobody ever got so much fun out of ridiculing the very people and principles whom he has now joined like a convert twitching down the sawdust aisle of one of Billy Sunday's old revivals and though he claims to retain certain of his old heresies it is plain that a good man has weakened at last, and for no specified cause. It could hardly be a fear for his possessions because Henry is a fellow who never did crowd himself to make as much money as he could and even today if he would play the typewriter instead of sitting around discussing liver trouble with a lot of doctors from Johns Hopkins he could make more money than even Mr. Roosevelt's bailiffs could snatch away.

Maybe, as one who contributed more than any other individual to the deflation of public authority and American institutions, Mr. Mencken now looks on his work, observes that the rabble has taken literally his contempt for human and divine authority and is afraid the mob will come marching up his street, busting windows indiscriminately and slugging everybody with a well-fed appearance such as his.

I expect to read soon that Mr. Mencken has joined the Shriners and the Elks and I hope to be present to cover the story when he joins the Tennessee fundamentalists and is totally immersed in Goose Crick wearing a white night shirt and blubbering "Hallelujah, Brother" between plunges beneath the cleansing flood.

"Simpson."

(As suggested by the frequent appearance in the news of Mrs. Simpson, King Edward's guest; Lawrence B. Simpson, American sailor sent to jail by the Nazis, and a lot of other Simpsons.)

City Editor—Don't call me Simpson!

(The curtain will be lowered five hours to denote the lapse of time while the story is taken over the telephone.)

• • • •

City Editor (as reported comes from phone booth)—What was it?

Reporter—He had three stories. One was about some shooting case • • • some fellow named Simpson. Another was about, well, I forget the details, but I distinctly remember the name.

City Editor—Come, come! What was it?

Reporter—Oh, yes, here it is • • • Simpson! And the third story was about a case in Bridgeport or Brooklyn or some place about a divorce or a mutiny or • • •.

City Editor—Anyhow, the name was Simpson.

Reporter—That's it. I knew it began with an "S."

• • • •

Telegraph Editor—There's a new general in the Spanish rebellion. Simpson is the name. He staged a surprise attack last night and took the village of Simpson.

Telegraph Editor—I hope so, sir. And here's a dispatch from Shanghai. Gen. Shim-Shun, of the Japanese forces, has given the Chinese 48 hours to apologize for the incident at Jimp-Tsun.

• • • •

Telegraph Editor—All right so far. The three Simpsons are still neck and neck.

Managing Editor—There are four, I think.

Telegraph Editor—Only three.

Managing Editor—There will be!

• • • •

Society Editor (answering phone)—Yes. Good morning. Oh, a wedding? Who? Miss Simpson? • • • what did you say the groom's name was? • • • Oh, yes, Simpson!

• • • •

Financial Editor (over ticker)—Good heavens!

Assistant—Whatzamattah?

Financial—Simpson's off four points.

Battle In Quaker City Growing In Intensity As Presidential Campaign Nears Climax.

By Eugene Pharo.

Philadelphia.

If Pennsylvania goes Democratic on November 3, it may be more difficult to prove which section, or at least which metropolitan area, was responsible for the result, than it is now to prove that the results in either Pittsburgh or Philadelphia may determine whether Roosevelt or Landon gets that big bloc of 36 electoral votes.

Pittsburgh may pile up so big a majority that the State will go for Roosevelt. On the other hand, it may poll an almost even vote, and if Philadelphia turns in even a moderately respectable majority for the President, that city may turn out to have brought about the miracle of converting the old home Commonwealth of Quay and Penrose into a Democratic stamping ground.

For this reason, although President Roosevelt and Col. Knox have paid Pittsburgh the compliment of camping on its doorstep, the effect of having the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, and of scheduling some of the big guns of the anti-New Deal battery for appearances in Philadelphia, is not being left out of anyone's reckoning. Whether Knox, Smith and Hoover, scheduled for appearance in the Quaker City on October 7, 8 and 16, are just the persons to bring about the result desired by the G. O. P. remains to be seen.

At present it appears that if Philadelphia goes heavily Republican, it will have undisputed credit for having held the Keystone State in the "right" column. With the western part of the State virtually abandoned to the Democrats and the mountain counties in the middle section combining with the conservative agricultural, and urban eastern counties to sustain the ancient pride of Republicanism, what Philadelphia does turns out to be a matter of the greatest moment.

It is for the latter reason that there has been considerable action since final registration day on October 3 revealed, in Philadelphia, a 38 per cent increase in Democratic registrations, as against one of less than 6 per cent in the Republican lists. This action has consisted of oratorical efforts over national radio stations, of threats of legal prosecutions and recriminations from both sides, and in interpretive statements that have been distinguished by a vaunting confidence on the part of the Democrats, and a furious complaining on the part of the Republicans.

The last have added charge to charge in an effort to discount the importance of Democratic registration gains, at the same time that they have claimed, on the basis of the majority of their own registrations, that the election is really in the bag. The figures for Philadelphia, as compared with 503,682 Republican and 299,298 Democratic registrations in 1935, now show approximately 521,000 Republican and 405,000 Democrat voters. The most favorable interpretation that even the Republicans can put on these figures in the privacy of their own clubrooms, is that the election is still a proper subject for even betting.

G. O. P. Charges WPA Workers Browbeaten.

NATURALLY the Republicans claim that the increase in Democratic registrations is due to a large extent to alleged intimidation of WPA and other Federal workers. The Republican city chairman has promised to have a number of the names struck off the lists as being fraudulent. The Democrats retort that a lot of the Republican registrations are the result of intimidation or gentle suggestion by private employers, and that the putative Republicans will be found to conceal a great horde of secret New Deal voters. There is probably enough truth behind each charge to prevent all but the most naive from putting the election down as won by either side, on the evidence of the figures reported.

At the same time, the number of additional voters who will enter the lists in Philadelphia on November 3, to punch out their convictions (should the question of voting machines be decided by then) or laboriously to pencil them in, makes indisputable the fact that Philadelphia can, if the trend turns out to be that way, definitely swing the State to Roosevelt. Hoover's plurality in Pennsylvania in 1932 was 157,592, as contrasted with the plurality of only 2,488 that was given Gov. Earle in 1934, and that of 45,745 that was given Senator Guffey. But suppose for a moment that all the rest of the 1932 vote remained static; then a change of exactly 78,797 votes in Philadelphia would swing the election to the Democrats. This result is obtained by halving the plurality of 1932 and adding just one vote. The Democrats could lose all the "phantom voters" with which the Republicans charge them, give several voters to the Republicans, and still deliver enough votes from their additional registration to bring about that much change.

Of course the vote in the rest of the State will not remain static, but should the results suggested for Philadelphia occur, changes in favor of the Democrats would almost certainly occur in the crucial counties elsewhere.

Keeping the above facts in mind, and reviewing some of the other factors that enter into the campaign in Pennsylvania, even the most objective observer would have trouble to convince himself that the Democratic boasts are entirely without foundation. Most of the Republican campaigning thus far has consisted of two things, in addition to occasional analyses of New Deal legislation that require serious students of economics to follow. These have been charges of New Deal corruption in the WPA, and of Roosevelt-ian radicalism and communism, which, they have sought to demonstrate, is endangering "the American way of living," or "the American form of Government." The last has been partly their answer to the actual fomenting of class hatred that Gov. Earle has indulged to an even greater degree than President Roosevelt, and partly an attempt to capitalize on the resentment of communism that is basic to the Catholic attitude—and anyone who travels through Pennsylvania's mining regions is cetrain to be impressed by the number of Roman and Greek Catholic churches that he sees.

Democrats Wooing Organized Labor.

THE DEMOCRATIC campaigners have handed back the charge of corruption and intimidation applied to the WPA, transmuting it only into the charge of coercion practiced by large employers and "economic royalists." Without confronting the charge of communism directly, they have done everything they could, by co-operating with union labor, and by protecting and even agumenting the rights of strikers, as well as by capitalizing Roosevelt's own record, to convince the average man that he has only friends among the Demoerats, whereas the Republicans are in cahoots with "Wall Street," and with every nefarious agency of international discord, and are intent upon making them into wage slaves or cannon fodder.

In connection with the above, let's look at the record—this time of the United States Bureau of the Census. This reveals that in Pennsylvania there are 9,631,350 persons, as of 1930. Of these, 431,257 are colored, and of the white 1,233,081 are foreign born and 1,858,106 are of immediate foreign parentage. In other words, nearly a third of the population are white citizens who still probably have a great deal to learn about the "American way of life."

Of the foreign-born, and those with foreign parents, there are 31 national strains. The most numerous are Italian, 613,257; Polish, 516,541; German, 487,241; Irish, 419,843; Czechoslovakian, 335,206; Austrian, 153,099; Russian, 269,935, and Lithuanian, 99,822.

These figures may throw some light on why President Roosevelt chose to talk about spending money and not about foreign "isms," when he was in Pittsburgh on October 1.

The Democrats have not neglected the nearly half a million colored voters any more than they have neglected the appeal to the working man of every occupation and nationality. More than 6,000 Negroes attended a large rally at Mt. Gretna on August 30 at which the fallacy of adhering to the party of Abraham Lincoln was explained to them by spokesmen of their own race. And there have been numerous groups organized among foreign-language groups everywhere in the State.

There was a secret meeting of some of the heads of the Ku Klux Klan held in the Stephen Girard Hotel in Philadelphia for three days ending September 27 at which, according to one report, tactics aimed at the New Deal were discussed. Whether this and other indications in the press lately of the importance of racial tolerance, indicate a subterranean plan of fierce-voiced, pervasive whispering toward the final days of the campaign, is the kind of question no adult voter needs to have answered—especially when full warning was given some months ago that this was going to be a dirty campaign.

The Intellectuals Have Their Say.

The editors of the New Republic recently polled 97 prominent Americans "who have in general taken a progressive political position" as to how they proposed to vote this year. Of the first 56 replies, 44 were for Roosevelt, 8 for Thomas, 3 for Browder, 1 for Landon and none for Lemke. With the permission of that weekly we are reprinting a cross-section of the replies it has received.

From Elmer Davis, novelist:

I'm going to vote for Roosevelt—and so would you if you were compassed about by so great a cloud of Republicans as I am this summer, and had to listen to them at every cocktail party. Beyond that, however, I think there is some faint hope that Roosevelt may do something; and no hope at all in the Mystery Man from Kansas and his far from mysterious supporters.

From John Dewey, noted educator and philosopher of education:

I intend to vote for Norman Thomas for President. It was a disappointment that no genuine mass third party was organized, especially in view of the fact that the so-called Union Party is a union of inflationists and semi-Fascist elements. I realize that fear of reactionary Republicanism will lead many to vote for Roosevelt who have no faith in the Democratic Party; but I do not believe that the actual difference between the policies of the old parties will be great, whoever is elected. I think the Republican Party is conducting a campaign under false pretenses.

From Theodore Dreiser, author of "An American Tragedy" and other famous novels:

I am for Roosevelt. It is with the more liberal and radical parties that my real sympathies lie, but just now I feel that they are so mismanaged that I cannot support them. Besides this, I do feel that at this election there is such a great difference between the main candidates, a difference which is so overwhelmingly in favor of Roosevelt, that it seems of major importance to me that he be elected.

My reasons for this, in general, are two: First, that I think his policies are more in line with the future organization of life than those of any President we have had in years; second, that I think the foreign relations of this country will need increasingly able handling during the next years, and I think that Roosevelt will be able to do that, whereas I doubt whether Landon has either the experience or the ability for it.

• • • •

I shall vote for Browder in November, and for several reasons: Among them being that I think it's high time, with America and the world in their present state, that people declare their principles with the ballot. And I happen both to want communism and to believe in its coming whether I want it or not. Certainly it is high time there was a genuine labor party in the field. The Communists are now pledged to that principle of the united front which is essential to the success of a labor party.

• • • •

From Fannie Hurst, novelist:

I belong to no political party. I shop about each voting year, and climb aboard whatever party lugger seems to me most seaworthy. Alas, it is usually a matter of accepting the least leaky.

This November I shall vote for Mr. Roosevelt. I have confidence in his ideals and his ideas. I feel that he is looking up the right streets. He has not always been able to find his way into them, but it seems to me that his social consciousness is responsible for a new and important trend in American psychology.

I think that the so-called moneyed classes in refusing Mr. Roosevelt because their pocket nerve is twitching, have neither the vision nor the wisdom to see that in his course lies their ultimate salvation.

My present hope is that our social, industrial and economic dilemmas can be corrected within the framework of democracy. The Roosevelt Administration is working well within that framework.

• • • •

From Carl Becker, noted historian of Cornell University:

Mr. Landon believes, or appears to believe, that the economic and industrial problems that are now pressing for some solution can best be solved by reducing the Government regulation of private business enterprise to the minimum; while Mr. Roosevelt believes, or appears to believe, that governmental regulation of some sort is essential for their solution. I shall therefore vote for Mr. Roosevelt because I believe that however wrong-headed he may have been and may still be he is at least wrong-headed in the right direction, whereas Mr. Landon suffers the grave disadvantage of being not only wrong-headed but wrong-headed in the wrong direction.

Roosevelt—has done better than anyone else could have done.

From Van Wyck Brooks, literary historian and essayist:

I am voting for Norman Thomas. I shall vote for the Socialist candidate in any case, but I think Thomas stands for a socialism that is both American and undiluted. I also feel that, at present, with so many radical factions, quarreling over inessentials, we need most of all an American "Popular Front," and that Thomas is far and away the best available leader for this.

Novel Of The South

By William Lyon Phelps

"Death Is A Little Man."

This is the title of a new American novel, written by Minnie Hite Moody, of Atlanta, and published by Julian Messner, New York, and I advise everybody to read it.

Our Southern States and Southern people, white and black, are furnishing excellent material for American writers. Mentioning only novels, think of the immense success during the last few years of "Lamb in His Bosom," by Caroline Meller, "So Red the Rose," by Stark Young, and "Gone With the Wind,' by Margaret Mitchell.

• • • •

The novel, "Death Is a Little Man," is worthy to stand with these three. It is much shorter, yet it suggests a vast range of life—the life of the whole colored race in the South.

I like it because it is entirely free from propaganda; the author is not trying to prove anything. She is not trying to arouse our anger or our prejudices, or even to suggest anything that ought to be done.

It is a picture of the colored people, in their daily life and associations, with astonishingly vivid and sharp delineation of individualities. I shall never forget the heroine, a real heroine in every sense of the word.

• • • •

The book is a fine illustration of what I call external and internal realism. The picture of the way these families live, their customs, clothes, housekeeping, pleasures, virtues and vices seems accurate in every detail. And even more striking is the way they think; for this novelist, God bless her! describes not only how persons feel but how they think.

Although there are plenty of exciting events in the story, there is never an attempt at sensationalism. These humble folk are seen with no illusions, but with tender, affectionate sympathy. She knows them and she loves them.

I cannot tell which I admire more in the style—the beauty of the descriptive prose, or the marvelous conversations in Negro dialect.

U. S. Girl Details 'Butcheries' Of Civil Strife in Barcelona

Priests and Nuns Were Murdered on Sight and Priceless Historical Treasures Burned, Her Letter to Aunt Here Relates.

Dictatorship either of the Right or of the Left will be the result of the Spanish civil war, writes an American girl graduate of the University of Barcelona in a letter to her Washington aunt. The girl had lived in Spain since 1930. She was evacuated from Barcelona aboard the cruiser Quincy September 9. Fearing reprisal—she expects to return to Spain as soon as conditions permit—the girl has asked that her name be withheld.

The letter, written from Montreux, September 9, follows, in part:

It seems ages since we received your letters and the news from you through the consulate in Barcelona . . . Now it is so beautiful here in Montreux—so quiet and peaceful — it hardly seems possible that three days ago we were still in a place where murder was the order of the day!

As the censorship on all letters going out of Spain was extremely strict, we could not risk telling you anything of the true conditions there.

As for what is really happening in Spain, you may be sure that few of the news reports are exaggerated. In fact, there is a great deal that they don't say. Of all the foreign impressions I have read and heard, none has been entirely correct in judging the Spanish situation. They all lack the insight that only a deep and intimate knowledge of the Spanish people can give. All are foreign impressions, biased by an alien point of view, while most are partisan to one faction or the other.

In Barcelona the fighting started in our immediate neighborhood. At 5 in the morning on the 19th of July, we were awakened by a volley of shots that was terrific. A police station a block away, occupied by armed policemen, was taken after a regular battle staged in our street. At the same time, the whole city broke out in a hell of gunfire and cannonfire that was terrifying. At noon, the militaries of Barcelona surrendered and the city fell into the hands of the anarchists. And you can only imagine what that meant!

After the overthrow of the Barcelona government, the dead and wounded could be counted in the thousands. Assassinations by the anarchists of those having anything to do with capital, the church or the aristocracy also ran into the thousands. The courts were immediately closed.

Priests and nuns were murdered on sight and, with few exceptions, all churches and convents that fell into the hands of the Reds were immediately burned with all their contents. Priceless historical treasures were thus lost. Only a very few churches were saved from destruction by the government and declared national monuments. In the villages, people were burned alive in the public square.

All this will seem incredible to you, but, in reality, it is only a part of what is happening. The recently instituted legal government of Spain is dominated by the Communists. The anarchists of Barcelona and the East Coast do not acknowledge the authority of Madrid. Those in Barcelona are now contemplating a declaration of independence from the rest of Spain. Madrid is expected to fall soon. Terrible fighting then is almost certain to follow, including the bombing of Barcelona. And the anarchists, in case they lose, will go so far as to fire the city, as a last resource . . . And all this is a question of weeks, of days.

Foreigners Safe.

On the whole, foreigners were safe in Barcelona up to the time we left. From the first we had the protection of the foreign consulates there, but we could not leave at once.

As soon as we got all our affairs more or less in order, we decided that the best thing we could do would be to get away until things quieted down. By that time the majority of the consuls were advising their nationals to leave while they could, because there was a possibility that soon they would no longer be able to guarantee their safety. Then the United States consulate telephoned that we could leave on an American warship which had just come into port. And we were certainly glad to accept. Remaining in Barcelona under such conditions was commencing to tell on our nerves. • • • There were on this trip about a dozen United States refugees, one an American woman who had married a Spaniard. She, with her two children, a little girl of a year and a half and a baby two weeks old, had left her husband in Spain to seek safety for the children. Poor girl!

Only foreigners can leave Spain now, and even they have to have a permit from the Red committee to do so. Except for one Austrian and one Swede, the refugees were Latin-Americans. And every one of them is going back to his country praising the splendid treatment received from both officers and men of this United States ship.

Lesson for World.

All the world, and the United States especially, should take a lesson from what is happening in Spain today. From the first, this civil war, which is essentially an internal question which has been waiting a solution for years, took on international aspects: France and the Soviet Union siding with Red Spain, Germany and Italy with Right Spain. England, of course, supported her own interests, and these can hardly be said to favor a Red Spain.

Since the overthrow of the Spanish monarchy, Communist propaganda has been permitted to undermine the semblance of republican government which was then inaugurated. The parties of the Right had been preparing for a coup d'etat for a long time. But what precipitated the affair was the assassination by the Left of the leader of the Right party. And now the country is divided into two armed camps.

In Red Spain, all private property has been confiscated. Rights of individuals are myths of bygone days.

But the problem of Europe and the world boils down to this: If the Reds win in Spain, the French Popular Front will gain strength. If Spain goes Right, the Rights in France will again take heart. Either way, the danger of a general European war will not be entirely averted. And no matter what may be the outcome in Spain, her people face misery under some form of dictatorship, Right or Left.

Last of Ottoman Grand Viziers Dies

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 8 (AP).—Tewfik Pasha, 95, last grand vizier of the Ottoman Empire, died today.

Tewfik Pasha played an important role in the councils of the pre-World War Turkish Empire. He was grand vizier during 1905 and 1906, rising to that position from the office of foreign minister.

He represented Turkey in most of its European diplomacy during that period, negotiating an Anglo-Turkey boundary dispute with Britain and an international compromise on the issue of foreign warships at Mytilene, on the island of Lesbos, then an important Turkish seaport.

Hudson Named U. S. Member Of World Court

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Oct. 8.—Dr. Manley O. Hudson, of Harvard University, tonight was elected to the World Court of International Justice, succeeding Frank B. Kellogg, former United States Secretary of State.

Dr. Hudson, fourth American to sit on the World Court bench, brings comparative youth to the international tribunal.

A jurist of proven capacity, he is but 50 years old. The average age of World Court judges is 66. He is a native of St. Peters, Mo.

Leader for Adherence.

For many years he has led the campaign in the United States—so far unsuccessful—for American adherence to the court.

He was nominated by the national groups of 35 countries. These made up a majority of the states represented in each of the electoral body, the League Assembly and the League Council.

Since the creation of the court in 1920 it has been one of Prof. Hudson's chief interests.

Each year he has published a review of its activities in the American Journal of International Law, and his popular handbook of the court has gone through many editions.

Convinced Darrow.

At one time, in a debate with Clarence Darrow at the University of Michigan, he persuaded Darrow to abandon his public opposition. He also debated the proposal with Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, the court's principal American antagonist, as the first public lecturer of the William E. Borah Foundation at the University of Idaho.

When, in 1935, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, led the Senate debate on the court, Dr. Hudson was at his elbow with a mass of facts and arguments.

In 1933, President Roosevelt appointed Dr. Hudson a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration, an entirely different institution from the Permanent World court of Justice.

For 13 years Dr. Hudson has been Bemis professor of international law at Harvard University, but has engaged in numerous public activities during the period, particularly in connection with the State and national bar associations.

With Wilson in Paris.

From the United States' entrance into the World War in 1917, Dr. Hudson devoted himself to a study of the terms of the future peace. He was a member of the body of inquiry organized by Col. House to prepare for the peace conference, and later accompanied President Wilson to Paris. There, he participated in the work of several commissions and later was sent on a mission to the Balkans to attempt to open up navigation on the rivers of central Europe.

Later, for a time, he participated in the work of the legal section of the League secretariat.

Besides Mr. Kellogg, who resigned from the court last year because of his health, American judges have been John Bassett Moore and Charles Evans Hughes, present Chief Justice of the United States. Both resigned before their terms were completed.

Recently Dr. Hudson declared "such an institution as the World Court is a necessity if force ever is to be replaced by law."

152d Parley Of Methodists Opens in City

400 Ministers and 100 Lay Delegates Registered as Meetings Start.

The 152d annual session of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South formally opened here last night a devotional service and a brief address by by the Rev. Edwin D. Mouzon senior bishop of the church.

When the services began last night more than 400 ministers and 100 lay delegates had registered at the convention headquarters at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church South, the representative church of Southern Methodism.

In his address Bishop Mouzon, who will preside at the principal meetings, extended greetings to the delegates and talked briefly on the mission of the minister in the world. A crowd of approximately 1,200 attended the services, which were followed a roll call of delegatees.

Education Board Meets.

Several meetings of church organizations were held yesterday afternoon. Dr. E. H. Blackard, of Baltimore, presided at a meeting of the church board of Christian education and the Rev. T. M. Swann, of Clifton Forge, Va., took charge of board of finance discussions. A meeting of the board of lay activities also was held to consider church programs for the coming year.

The conference will come to a climax Monday with announcement by Bishop Mouzon of appointment of pastors for churches in Maryland and Washington and in parts of Virginia and West Virginia.

Bishop Mouzon will speak before the conference again this morning, while Bishop Paul B. Kern will be the speaker at tonight's session. Bishop Kern, who was for four years in charge of misisonary work in the Orient, will talk on missionary activities of the churches.

Church lay activities will be discussed tomorrow night by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Washington. Bishop Mouzon will be the speaker Sunday morning, while Bishop W. F. McDowell, retired, of Washington, will address the conference Sunday night.

Memorial Rites Sunday.

Special memorial services will be held at 3 p. m. Sunday for deceased members of the church clergy. The traditional ceremony of the Love Feast will be held Sunday, at 9 a. m.

A committee headed by Dr. J. Manning Potts, of Richmond, has announced it intends to ask the conference to indorse a proposal to hold the general conference of the church at Richmond. The next of the general conferences, held every four years, is scheduled for 1938. The plan to hold the 1938 session in Richmond already has been indorsed by the West Virginia conference.

Dr. W. Angie Smith, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Church, is acting as conference host. Dr. H. M. Canter, pastor of Epworth Methodist Church here, has been named secretary of the conference.

Hit by Street Car, Mrs. Walker Dies

Mrs. Mary Ellen Walker, widow of Joshua A. Walker, died Wednesday at Homeopathic Hospital. For a number of years she had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur S. Williams, at the Grafton Hotel. She died from injuries suffered when she was knocked down by a street car September 12.

On September 26 Mrs. Walker celebrated her ninetieth birthday in her hospital room which was filled with flowers and other gifts from her friends and relatives.

Survivors are her daughter, a son, Richard J. Walker, four grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

he sponsored the present zone fares and helped make ineffective an order issued by the commission to force taxicabs to install meters. Roberts was then special counsel of the regulatory body.

Views Reversed.

Now, Roberts is champion of the meters, and Keech's present view, it is believed, has been adopted by the commission.

While Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, was chairman of the House District appropriations sub-committee, there was little chance of repealing the rider which barred the commission from enforcing its old meter order.

Roberts pointed out in his report that Blanton is no longer a member of Congress and stated that "systematic efforts to secure some measure of control of taxicab rates and service has had far more successful results as a consequence."

"The number of taxicabs has increased to a point where it is difficult for a driver to earn even a meager living," he added. "If he confines himself to rendering safe taxicab service. The tendency toward unsatisfactory and unsafe service and toward the use of taxicabs for unlawful purposes is therefore growing.

"A number of sections of the city suffer from violent discriminations as a result of the zone system of rates and the present zone boundaries."

The Federation of Citizens Associations, however, has long been a defender of the zone fare system and an opponent of the meter order.

Discussing his proposal to clarify the provision of the public utility act relating to depreciation reserves, Roberts said:

"The obvious failure of the street railway company to maintain adequate reserves for the rehabilitation of its property makes such legislation increasingly desirable."

Changes Advocated.

The people's counsel urged enactment of the long-delayed small loans bill, a uniform sales act and a conditional sales law, an act regulating assignment of wages, a wage fraud law, the creation of a governmental corporation to operate parking facilities, an investigation of the cost and feasibility of a subway system, and a reorganization of the administrative functions of the District government.

Strike Tie-up Feared In Utah Mine Fields

Salt Lake City, Oct. 8 (U.P.).—Danger of a general mine strike became more acute tonight when Utah mine operators and union leaders, apparently hopelessly deadlocked, ended an all-day conference.

Upless a compromise is reached, union officials said, approximately 3,000 mine, mill and smelter workers will walk off their jobs in northern and central Utah at midnight Friday.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

A cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. You can relieve them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery that aids nature to soothe and heal the infected membranes and to relieve the irritation and inflammation as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Medical authorities have for many years recognized the wonderful effects of Beechwood Creosote for treating coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations. A chemist worked out a special process of blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children. Thousands of doctors now use Creomulsion in their own families and practice, and druggists rank Creomulsion top because in this genuine, original product you can get a real dose of Creosote so emulsified that it goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles, especially those that start with a common cold and hang on and on. Get a bottle of Creomulsion right now from your druggist, use it all up as directed and if you fail to get satisfactory relief, he is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Coronation to Strip Studios Of Top Stars

All of Hollywood Eager to Witness Crowning of British King.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 8.—This film capital will be a deserted village next May when England makes the former Mr. Wales officially Edward VIII if all filmsters planning to take in the show make the grade.

At least 30 top picture names are already bedeviling studio main guys for coronation-time vacations, and the list grows daily.

Those who put their bids in early are mostly British—the broad "A" section of the picture colony will eye the King's premiere almost to a man—but the idea is growing, and when the Hollywood contingent is complete it will probably contain more citizens than subjects.

Subjects and Citizens.

British players yearning to gander the coronation, or at least the parade, include Merle Oberon, Ronald Coleman, David Niven, Freddie Bartholomew, Elizabeth Allen, Leslie Howard, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, C. Aubrey Smith, Sir Guy Standing, Ralph Forbes, Reginald Denny, Erroll Flynn, Eric Blore, Benita Hume, Edmund Gwenn, Herbert Mundin, Donald Crisp, Brian Aherne, Maureen O'Sullivan and others.

The growing list of Americans numbers Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Taylor, Edward Everett Horton, Robert Montgomery, Clark Gable, Norma Shearer, Edna Mae Oliver, the (three) Marx brothers, Hunt Stromberg and Joseph Mankiewicz (producers), and Directors Clarence Brown, W. S. Van Dyke and Jack Conway.

Claudette Colbert (French), has an invitation from a London firm to view the parade from its balcony, and to bring a dozen friends if she likes.

Rialto

"CIMARRON." RKO-Radio's picturization of the novel of the same name by Edna Ferber, costarring Irene Dunne and Richard Dix, with Edna May Oliver, George E. Stone, Robert McWade, Estelle Taylor and a stellar cast. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. A revival.

Taking rank with such epochal cinematic achievements as "The Covered Wagon," "The Iron Horse," "The Oregon Trail" and similar epics of the pioneering era in the development of this continent, "Cimarron," RKO-Radio's film version of the Edna Ferber novel of the rise of Oklahoma, was revived yesterday as chief screen feature at the newly opened Rialto Theater.

There is inspiration in every inch of this distinguished celluloid footage. It traces with exactitude and a high degree of dramatic forcefulness the rise of a Western State from a desolate prairie State to a Commonwealth of tremendous resourcefulness and vigor.

Perhaps more than any picture of recent years, "Cimarron" catches the truly American spirit of indomitable progress. The film opens with a land rush and ends on a tragic note with the death of Yancy Cravat out among the oil derricks in the State he has helped more than anyone else to create. This is the role played by Richard Dix—and probably the best he has ever done for the screen.

In the opposite assignment of Sabra Cravat, Irene Dunne offers a portrayal that placed the stamp of stardom upon her 'way back yonder in 1931 when "Cimarron" first was released. Estelle Taylor, George E. Stone, Robert McWade, Edna May Oliver and a long list of others contribute generously to the superlative quality that was the Academy Award winner of its season.

The new bill at the Rialto is completed by the usual roster of short-reel subjects and newsreel. This bill is worth anybody's time and money, especially with the augmented comfort of the refurbished Rialto, with all of the leg-room and everything, being what it is.

Culbertson on Bridge

The most difficult hands, from both declarer's and defenders' points of view, are those in which tricks must be garnered piecemeal from all four of the suits. This is far more confusing than the process of concentrating on one or two suits. All the usual problems are present, such as maintaining communication between partnership hands, conserving stoppers, etc., and, in addition, memories become sorely taxed with the burden of noting discards that come almost haphazardly, instead of in the usual, easily remembered "packages."

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH

SOUTH

♦ J 10 8 6
♣ K J 7 4

The bidding:

| SOUTH | WEST | NORTH | EAST |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 club | Pass | 1 spade | Pass |
| 1 N. T. | Pass | 2 hearts | Pass |
| 2 N. T. | Pass | 3 N. T. | Pass |
| Pass | Double (final bid) | | |

No one could have accused North of timidity in the bidding. In the first place, he should have responded to the opening club bid with one diamond, in the hope that South then could name a major suit at the one level. North's spades and hearts were hardly so robust that each should come in for a full bid and then no trump be raised, as well.

West decided to open the only unbid suit and accordingly laid down the ace and another diamond. Dummy won the second lead and led the jack of spades. East and declarer ducked. West won with the king. On the theory that a spade return would give declarer a free finesse against the possible queen in East's hand (as though declarer could not manage the finesse for himself?) West now shifted to a low club. Declarer captured East's queen and shifted on his own account to the lead of the ace and a low heart. West properly ducked the second round, but declarer, as well as West, had noted the fall of East's ten on the first heart lead and now went right up with dummy's queen. A low diamond to the jack (West discarding a spade); then another lead up to dummy's remaining 9 5 of hearts was taken by West with the king (East discarding the five of clubs.)

West, still fearing the spade situation, excited with his last heart. While dummy's nine won, East made the horrible discard of the club eight, hanging on to all of his spade queen guards for dear life, even though it should have been apparent from declarer's failure to continue with spade establishment that he, the declarer, must be reduced to the blank ace. Declarer let go the four of clubs. After cashing the last diamond trick, declarer, who had followed East's club discards with an eager eye, entered his hand with the spade ace and laid down the club jack. West won, but East's ingloriously falling ten spot settled the hash of the defenders. West was forced to return a club to declarer's miraculously promoted seven spot, for the doubled contract's fulfillment.

About The Showshops

THE Warner Brothers are at it again.

About every so often the boys think up a diabolical scheme for making life miserable for some of their most attractive players. You will recall that at the time of President Roosevelt's inauguration their aberration was "The Forty-Second Street Special," which this reporter boarded in Baltimore at 5 a. m. and stayed aboard until it docked down near the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at about 11:30 a. m.

BELL.

Among the harried passengers on that transcontinental junket were such luminaries as Bette Davis, Joe E. Brown, Tom Mix, Laura La Plante, Eleanor Holm, Leo Carrillo, who only recently finished a week of personal appearances at the Earle, and a few score more of like durability and patience. It was an heroic tour these hardy people made aboard that clattering and gaudily illuminated perambulating nightmare.

So now the Warners are launching another one of slightly different contour. Sixteen of the most beautiful girls in Hollywood are expected to visit Washington next month. Washington has been disignated as one of the stops on a three-week cruise between Hollywood and New York in a huge American Airline passenger plane. This will be one of 24 ports of call the plane will make in its expedition in the interests of the Warner Brothers' production of "Gold Diggers of 1937." It was, of course, to be taken for granted that there was a publicity trick in it somewhere.

The ship and its passengers will do their flying by day and, for the most part, occupy hangars and swank hotels at night.

The 16 girls to be chosen for the trip will be selected from among the 200 who compose the chorus of the new "Gold Diggers." For many of the gals the trip will signalize a "gala homecoming," since at least 90 per cent of the members of the troupe hail from points outside the boundaries of the golden State of Cal-eye-for-nye-aye. It is reported that two Washington girls are in the "Gold Diggers" ensemble and they, quite naturally, hope to be among the double octet chosen for the trip.

It is part of the scheme to have the girls make personal appearances in conjunction with first-run showings of the picture, when they are not otherwise engaged, or completely and literally up in the air. They will be seen here at the Earle Theater unless I am being utterly deluded by a bit of fictional composition on the part of Frank La Falce, of the Warner Brothers' publicity department, and his able henchmen, the Messrs. Bill Ewing and Dan Terrell.

The precise itinerary of the cruise has not as yet been definitely determined, but it is the present expectation that the "Gold Diggers" ship will reach here late in November or in early December.

It was a sufficiently exacting task the other night to make a choice of "Miss Hyattsville" from among a group of 21 beautiful young women. I am fairly well satisfied not to be in Busby Berkeley's shoes at the present moment. All he has to do is pick 16 girls out of 200 to make this air trip over the country.

It is stated, by the way, that this will be the first time any theatrical unit ever has made so comprehensive a tour by plane.

• • • •

Reverting as we already have, inadvertently, to that "Miss Hyattsville" contest, it should have been remarked here long ago that an extremely diverting stage show was put on while the judges were wracking their brains for the power to do justice to the task imposed upon them.

Foremost, it seemed to me, among the youngsters who contributed to the stage goings-on was a little chap, surely not more than 8 or 10 years old, by the name of Martin Yago, billed as "the new Al Jolson of Washington," or something of the sort. When Dave Ginsberg made the announcement, the first thought was that he was laying it on a little thick. There have not been too many Al Jolsons springing up in Washington during the past three decades. But this Master Yago is an authentic successor to the great mammy man, if ever there was one. He sang Bobby Breen's "Let's Sing Again" number better than the Breen boy sang it and then took encores that took the overflow crowd the way Grant is reputed to have taken Richmond.

There is a fortune in this kid—unless change of voice and the vagaries of adolescence destroy a talent that he now possesses in superabundance.

• • • •

I quote verbatim a letter just to hand from Walter H. Zeydel, 1910 Kalorama road: "My dear Mr. Bell: I have enjoyed your daily comment on the drama and sundry matters of the theater and to show my appreciation I am letting you in (?) on a little matter of which you perhaps already are aware. While strolling along E street this noon (Wednesday) I noticed a man just ahead of me who looked very familiar. He stopped at the next crossing for the traffic light to change. Then I recognized him. It was Melvyn Douglas, of 'Gorgeous Hussy' fame. I had the affrontery to address him by name and he very graciously acknowledged that he was Douglas. It later came to me that Helen Gahagan, his wife, is appearing currently at the National, hence his presence here. You might tell your feminine readers that he is more handsome in persona propria than he is on the screen. I wish I had told him that his performance in 'The Gorgeous Hussy' surpassed that of any other member of the cast—which is true—and that I would like to see him in more pictures. Very truly (Signed)

"WALTER H. ZEYDEL."

I largely concur in Mr. Zeydel's estimate of Mr. Douglas' performance in the Joan Crawford picture. It was a splendid piece of work, just as Miss Gahagan's is in "And Stars Remain"—and, of course, Clifton Webb's.

• • • •

I recall that in the play Miss Gahagan's role is that of Cynthia Hope. So in Tuesday morning's review, I also recall, I consistently referred to the character as Sylvia. That's what an early deadline and the rush of crowding two hours' reviewing into 40 minutes will do for you. Yet there are those who pretend to believe that the drama critic's job is just one continuous round of pleasure. Oh, yeah?

Indian Summer Note.

After yesterday's humid heat, I quite definitely have heaved the waistcoat into the ash can.

Co-ops Called Red Antidote, Road to Plenty

System Offers Route to Abundance Without Chaos, League Told.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Leaders of the co-operative movement today termed it an antidote for communism, socialism and fascism and a route to "an economy of abundance" as the tenth biennial Congress of the Co-operative League of the United States of America was opened.

Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, recommending a better distribution of power and wealth, said that "when the masses are getting a better living, and so long as work at fair wages is supplied, there won't be any revolution in this country."

He asserted that co-operative buying, selling, producing and financing to give consumers more value for less money was "the most natural next step forward that there could be."

Dr. J. P. Warbasse, of Brooklyn, president of the league, told delegates that:

"Co-operation offers the way to make the detour around fascism and to arrive at an economy of abundance without passing through the horrors of social chaos and the valley of economic destruction and death."

Dr. Warbasse declared there were 12,000 consumers' co-operative societies in the United States with 4,000,000 members and a business turnover last year of more than $400,000,000.

Currency Speculators Are Warned in Austria

Vienna, Oct. 8 (AP).—Ludwig Draxler, Austrian finance minister, tonight warned price speculators they would be punished as Austria sought to eliminate effects of devaluation in other countries.

He said Austria was attempting to solve the difficulties arising from currency devaluation in other countries by subsidies for industrial production and materials.

"Devaluation here would threaten Austria's social standards," he declared, "and no Austrian government will assume the responsibility of endangering internal safety."

"NAUGHTY MARIETTA." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the operetta with book and lyrics by Rida Johnson Young and music by Victor Herbert, adapted to the screen by John Lee Mahin, costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, with Frank Morgan, Elsa Lanchester, Douglas Dumbrille, Joseph Cawthorn, Akim Tamiroff, Harold Huber and Edward Brophy. Directed by W. S. Van Dyke. A revival going into its second week.

From the moment we glimpsed this picturized operetta, originally executed in the best Victor Herbert manner, we have been of the opinion that it takes rank among the foremost of the screen's musicalized operettas. It possesses vigor of action, fine characterization, rousing tunes, and the incomparable direction of Woody S. Van Dyke to make sure that all of these things register on the gelatin and the sound track.

Furthermore, it boasts the vocal abilities of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, two of the cinema's foremost voices, in every sense competent to realize the full measure of beauty of one of Victor Herbert's most effective scores.

With the comedy of Frank Morgan and Elsa Lanchester, in private life the wife of the eminent Charles Laughton, to add to the luster of the occasion, it is small wonder that "Naughty Marietta" continues its revival run another week at the Little Theater.

"The March of Time" and other short reel subjects add to the attractiveness of an ace bill.

Drives 1,000,000 Miles

Battle Creek, Mich., Oct. 8 (AP).—Dan Van Vleet's record of driving 1,000,000 miles without a traffic accident was at an end today. His automobile was struck from the rear yesterday by another motorcar in downtown traffic and four other automobiles became involved in the collision. Van Vleet, a postal special delivery messenger, suffered facial cuts.

Before the General Died

These slightly perturbed young people would be Madeleine Carroll and Gary Cooper as they appear in the co-stellar roles of "The General Died at Dawn," the film play that already has enjoyed a successful F street week and today takes possession of the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater. The background is war-torn China under a grim provincial leader.

Gorfine Named Head Of Roosevelt Electors

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Emanuel Gorfine, speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates, was appointed State chairman of the National Council of Roosevelt electors today. The appointment was made by Democratic National Chairman Farley. Gorfine will appoint chairmen in other Maryland communities to help raise funds for the national campaign.

New Film Hits Are Previewed On West Coast

Hot Off Wires Come These Vignettes of the New Hollywood Releases.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 8.—Picketing the preview parade:

"THE GAY DESPERADO." (Pickford-Lasky.) Gay is the word for this bright, mad musical comedy, and let it be a lesson to Hollywood. It shows what moviemakers could do and usually fall short of.

Nino Martini, starred, does everything a singing leading man could do, but it isn't enough to top Leo Carrillo, who steals the show from here to Hoboken as a goofy Mexican bandit with admiration for gangster methods and an ear for music.

The "Desperado" departs completely from the standard, backstage movie musical, and from swift establishment of the plot, through Martini's vocal quieting of a riot that breaks out among bandits completing their education at a gangster movie, to the payoff it moves at a headlong clip.

Carrillo kidnaps the singer and makes him a member of his bandit gang because he likes Martini's voice. Then by way of initiation forces him to kidnap Lupino and her wealthy American boy friend who have eloped to Mexico but find the justice of the peace office closed.

Carrillo discovers the boy friend's wealth, decides on a "snatch" in the best American manner, and enlists the aid of Stanley Fields, an American gangster, and his mob.

Dialogue is swell throughout, notably Carrillo's gambling gangster phrases in the Latin manner. Mischa Auer makes his mark as a 90 per cent silent Indian with some grand pantomime.

This is the second, and probably the last, for the Mary Pickford-Jesse Lasky combine, and it seems a shame. The "Desperado" and Francis Lederer's "One Rainy Afternoon" were top entertainment.

Put it on your "must" list.

"THE MAGNIFICENT BRUTE." (Universal). Jutting-jawed Victor McLaglen with a little of his "Informer" style and a great deal of the well known "Sez you, sez me" routine.

Aside from that, the "Brute" is a good, tough melodrama of the steel mills, with Binnie Barnes, lots of action and some finely photographed rolling mill backgrounds.

McLaglen's foil is William Hall, another behemoth and his rival for tophand honors around the mill circuit. Barnes plays the beautiful but fickle waitress who is always the tophand's gal, no matter who the tophand is.

McLaglen busts Hall as top, then is framed in a carnival wrestling match by his rival who induces Barnes to bet a collection gathered by McLaglen for the widow of a fallen workman, and the upshot is McLaglen is accused of stealing the money.

Plot centers in McLaglen's recovery of the mill-workers' esteem, aided and abetted by Jean Dixon, who ultimately gets her man.

Good part for young Billy Burrud, as Dixon's son, and principal brute actor, and another for Henry Armetta as comedy relief. The story is based on Owen Francis' novel, "Big."

"THE BIG GAME." (RKO-Radio). One of the best football pictures in many a day, although filled with that same old hokum. A large share of the credit should go to an excellent story by Francis Wallace.

Chief feature of the play is the appearance of eight 1935 All-Americans under their own names—Jay Berwanger, William Shakespeare, Bobby Wilson, Monk Moscrip, King Kong Klein, Gomer Jones, Bones Hamilton and Frank Alustiza.

Philip Houston and June Travis are adequate as the leads and Andy Devine is excellent in comedy. Bruce Cabot does the team prima donna and menace who turns white as ably as possible.

*Having enjoyed a prosperous week at the Earle, "The Texas Rangers" now moves down to the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for a continuation of its downtown popularity. # The Post's New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

Manhattan Cocktail.

LAMENT: Al Smith met his former Tammany colleagues at the Holy Name Novena this week. It was the first time he's faced them since his pro-Landon speech . . . The political chieftains were silent, and their immobility made Smith nervous. He finally spoke up—addressing a friend of long standing. "How'd you like the speech?" Smith asked . . . The group remained emotionless. Al's friend looked up and solemnly answered: "What speech—and who made it?"

CRITICISM: Gov. Lehman, who had contributed to Smith's campaign fund when Al was a Presidential candidate, this week asked him to serve—as he always has—as honorary chairman of the Lehman campaign committee. "I can't do it," Smith answered . . . Sunday night Smith went to a Turkish bath where he usually meets some old companions and greeted a friend—who had just heard the Lehman report . . . "Hey, you're late," Smith welcomed. "If you want a rub-down fast you can use my marble slab here" . . . "No, thanks," was the polite refusal. "It's probably a rubber one."

REALITY: The Federal Theater Project is producing "Bess Mona," a play set in Africa. To achieve reality the director hired an all-Negro cast of 70. The script is ready, the costumes and props complete—but the director still isn't content . . . These Harlem Othellos he's just discovered are much too fair. And so on opening night the entire cast have been ordered to apply burnt cork to their faces—to make them look African.

TRIUMPH: Dick Powell, who just arrived with his bride, related this last night—concerning the screening of "Stage Struck." Powell was called to pose for retakes of one scene—but nobody could locate the blue-striped suit he had worn in the earlier shots. Frank McHugh, however, was wearing such a suit—and permitted Powell to borrow it . . . "The pants are too short," Dick complained, "so call the studio tailor and let him open up the cuffs." McHugh squawked, and then effected a compromise. "Make it a close-up shot," he suggested, "and shoot him from the waist up . . ."

FAME: Irving Thalberg died without ever seeing this message . . . When "Romeo and Juliet" made its Broadway debut, the premiere program carried a foreword in which it was explained that the production of this movie was so gigantic that it necessitated the brain of a Billy Rose to achieve it . . . Rose attended the premiere, read the program and then—after viewing the picture—sent Thalberg this telegram: "Just saw 'Romeo and Juliet.' Please send me a pair of your old shoes. I want to shine them for you."

STYLE: Mrs. George S. Kaufman, as an editor of Harper's Bazaar, recently invited a group of representative young men of New York to meet her at the Plaza. She made no explanation, except that it was "to play a new game," but ushered these men, including Eddie Duchin, Bennett Cerf and Max Kriendler, into a drawing room . . . "A young lady wearing an unusual gown will enter here soon," Mrs. Kaufman stated. "I will distribute sheets of paper to each of you—and want you to write your reactions." . . . The lady—a model—entered, remained while the men wrote their reports about her stunning dress, &c., and then made her exit . . . These reports soon will appear in the magazine, as a fashion article covering a complete page—next to the photo of the model. None of the reports will be edited—except, perhaps, that of the distinguished gent who simply wrote: "What a wench! What's her phone number?"

FAME: Jim Braddock hasn't earned a dime since he won the championship, and probably is poorer now than when he was on relief . . . Braddock has rejected offers to appear in vaudeville—at least Joe Gould, his manager, has been rejecting them for Jim . . . "They want me to appear with the champ," his manager explains, "and I can't see doin' five-a-day!"

CHATTER: Charges soon will be preferred against Albany's district attorney for alleged laxity in prosecuting gamblers . . . When J. P. Morgan sailed for a yachting cruise the other day, his pharmaceutical bill was $740—he's still that sick . . . The Bar Association is considering advocating the banning of a coast-to-coast radio program which offers free legal advice. It's cutting into the law business . . . Gaston B. Means, serving time for the Lindbergh baby hoax, has grown a full beard and lost 30 pounds . . . Ben Bernie has wagered $14,000 on Roosevelt's re-election . . . The Musicians Union picketing of movie houses, to bring back flesh entertainment, will spread to Philadelphia before Friday . . . A juvenile film star was beaten up at a night club here Sunday night.

Ekins Expects to Go On to Manila Today; Others Are Far Behind.

By the United Press.

Singapore (Friday), Oct. 9.—The KLM-Royal Dutch air liner in which H. R. Ekins is flying to Batavia, Java, en route to Manila, took off from Seletar Airdrome at 5:35 a. m., local time (5:05 p. m., Eastern standard time), today.

The big, silver Douglas air liner hurtled into a tropic dawn and crossed the Equator within 15 minutes after the take-off. It was scheduled to arrive at Batavia at about 10 a. m.

Ekins said he expected to spend this afternoon and tonight in Batavia and to continue to Manila tomorrow. He was delighted with the success of his flight to date, pointing out that he is leading his two rival New York newspaper writers by nearly 5,000 miles in the race around the world by air from Lakehurst, N. J., and will be in Manila far in advance of his departure date on the Pan-American Airways' China Clipper for San Francisco.

The two other air racers—Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal-International News Service, and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times-NANA Service, were at Sharjah, Persia, nearly three days' flying time behind the leader. The big British Imperial Airways' biplane, Hengist, on which they have flown from Brindisi, Italy, was far behind schedule, delayed by headwinds and mechanical trouble.

D. C. Gets $85,739 Under Pension Act

The District of Columbia received $85,739.60 of $8,232,195 allotted to 14 States and the District by the Social Security Board for the period October 1 to December 31, it was disclosed yesterday.

The District's allocation was classified as follows:

Old-age pensions, $39,317.50; needy blind pensions, $590.15, and children's aid, $45,831.95.

The Federal grants are based on anticipated State expenditures. In the case of aged and needy blind pensions the two governments share on a 50-50 basis. For dependent children, the Federal share is about one-third of the State's.

SYNOPSIS.

Inspector Noel Irving, of the Canadian Mounted, dynamites the hideout of Frank Rocco, master criminal, not knowing two women were with him. Noel is discharged, disgraced, while Rocco becomes a glorified legend. Noel receives a midnight call in his Winnipeg apartment from an engaging young stranger who calls himself Jimmy and asks Noel to be his partner in a secret prosperous venture and to help him outwit the gang who are pursuing him. While they are talking Jimmy is shot dead. Noel and his friend, Sergt. Spencer, search for clews to Jimmy's identity, but find none, except a small picture of a beautiful girl who looks like him. Noel is suspected of implication. He sets out to clear his name and avenge Jimmy's murder. He learns the lad was a flyer and finds his monoplane, and that he was recently in Fort McMurray, where Noel plans to fly the plane, hoping the murder gang will try to kill him and thus reveal their identity. He refuses to let Sergt. Spencer go with him.

CHAPTER 4.

"Those men'll know that you're Irving. They won't let you live 24 hours. Two guns are better than one, Noel. You and I've stood leg to leg on several tough jobs——"

Noel cut Spencer short. "You're not going to make a widow out of Eleanor. I can gamble, but you can't." With a glance at the eastern sky, where the gray light was broadening, he bade: "Help me get this plane ready to hit the air. I want to be 200 miles from Winnipeg when day breaks."

They stripped the canvas from the radial, pulled up the toy anchor, untied the mooring ropes and swung the Diomede lakeward.

Silent, downcast, Spencer stood on a pontoon to say good-by; and Noel, reading his gloomy fears, said to him:

"Stop worrying about me, Herm. I'll take care of myself. I always have." The words sounded hollow to his own ears. For him the trail ahead, against unknown enemies and into unknown dangers, was like a leap into a dark chasm. But he kept his voice cheerful and reached out his hand. "Well, here's shoving off, old man. If I win this trick—and I feel I'm going to—I'll bring these men back and turn 'em over to you. If I lose, I'll send you a wireless from hell and tell you who they are."

Over the nose of his plane Noel looked north, across a range of timbered hills, and saw the Forks of the Clear Water and Athabasca, and spotted Fort McMurray, nestling between the two big rivers.

From his height of 11,000 feet the little steel-end hamlet, glinting in the afternoon sun, seemed hardly the size of a postage stamp. Its single street was a mere ant run, and its buildings were microscopic dots of brown and white.

Flexing the stiffness from his arms and legs, he made ready for the ticklish job of pontoon landing. The lengthy hours of flight that day across the prairie provinces had tired him, rusty as he was at piloting; and the long "dry hop" from Edmonton north to McMurray, over waterless country where a konking engine would have meant a fatal crack-up for his pontooned Diomede, had driven him high up into the fleecy woolpack and kept him on nervous edge for the last 200 miles.

As he looked down at the river hamlet a tingle of uneasiness ran through him. Without a doubt Jimmy's enemies, or at least some sharp-eyed scouts for them, were yonder at that little town. Regardless of whether McMurray had been Jimmy's base or merely a port of call, it was a strategic post, the jumping off place for the entire north; and those men would not leave it unguarded.

When he stepped ashore at McMurray he would be a marked man. And he would not know who his enemies were till they had struck at him. It was like trying to locate a rattlesnake by groping around in its covert till it lashed at you—and trusting to luck that you could dodge its strike.

From the Forks his eye followed the winding Athabasca on into the north, across a hundred miles of savage muskeg wilderness; and he had his first glimpse of the real northland. An awe crept over him as he gazed to the dim watery horizon. The strangeness and huge immensity of the Three River region fairly staggered him.

"And that," he breathed, "all that country yonder—that's only the beginning of the north!" In his mind's eye he saw those wild lands stretching on and on down north, past the great barriers and sub-arctic rockies, to the polar ocean 2,000 miles away.

Truly, this vast unpeopled country, basking under the midnight sun in summer and ravaged by 60 below storms through its long, white winter, had been a fit stamping ground for the hard bitten Jimmy.

As his eyes swept that savage wilderness he wondered why any man as young and ardent and sociable as Jimmy should have buried himself in a Godforsaken land like this, away from human company and good times. That girl in his watch lived somewhere outside, out in the city country—he had been taking those furs to her. If she was his girl friend would he have come into this north and lived here for long months without her? Hardly. He'd have brought her along. They'd have hit the trail together.

Whatever the relationship between those two, this girl had been very precious to Jimmy—a person set apart from all the rest of the world. Jimmy had kept her picture when he had rid himself of every other clew to his identity; and he had paused to buy those matched silvers for her when the shadows of death were hovering over him . . .

Throttling down to idle revs, he pushed the stick sharply forward and began the long glide for the Clearwater slough, where the northern planes had a pier and aerial base.

Unused to pontooned craft, he wished that this landing on the narrow slough was over with. These people at McMurray would be watching him come in; and if he sat down as clumsily as at Edmonston his story about being a roving geologist, prospecting by air, might not get by.

Dropping down and down, out of the woolpack and through the wispy stratus below, he watched the town and slough rise up to meet him. At the railhead wharf a Hudson Bay steamer was anchored, awaiting the weekly train from Edmonton. From the slouth a narrow road led back 300 yards, through an aspen drogue, to the town itself. At the plane pier a red Bellanca was moored, a number of men were at work, and some Indians were stretched out asleep on the planking.

Noel glided over the pier and on north to the Forks, kicked the Diomede around, dropped down into the slough, leveled off and headed back for the aerial base, skimming low over the water.

After an interminable minute the plane touched, smacked along on the wavelets, finally sank its heels into the current and sat down—somewhat splashily but better than he had expected.

He flicked the throttle up a notch and taxied to the pier on easy revs.

Two men in a motor canoe came out to get him, towed him alongside the Bellanca; and he stepped out upon the wharf.

A lanky raw-boned man of 30, who was directing the men at work, walked over to meet him.

"Hullo, partner," the man greeted, with a grin and friendly handclasp. "Name's Barclay. 'Strap' to you. I push a crate up and down the Three Rivers for the Alberta and Arctic mail. What jail did you break out of?"

"Ontario," Noel replied. He liked this Arctic pilot, with humorous drawl and blunt, honest features. "My name's Lanier. Geologist. Freelancing. There's a sort of lull over east, so I thought I'd give this Three Rivers country a spin."

"Huh! It'll give you the spin! If you're heading down that God awful drag"—he motioned into the savage north—"and if you're planning to knock around down there very long, I hope you haven't got any relations who'll miss you much."

"Is it all that bad?"

"Oh it's not so tough right now, in summer, but Lord pity you after the ducks go south. Anything that gets out of that country for the winter has got sense. I'm telling you!"

Hollywood's Film Folks

By Sidney Skolsky.

Hollywords.

Hollywood, Oct. 8.

Actors and actresses come to Hollywood with the hope of being another Gable or another Garbo. Think of the number of actresses who were touted as "another Garbo," and then think of how many are appearing on the screen now. The movie audiences don't want "another." They go for a new personality. Consider the sudden success of Robert Taylor.

ROBERT TAYLOR.

Yet, Metro has on the pay roll an actor whom it believes is "another Robert Taylor." His career parallels Taylor's. He attended the same dramatic school that Taylor went to; he worked in a crime short, as did Taylor, and he was loaned to another studio to make a feature, as was Taylor.

* * * *

Now, with Robert Taylor's big success, Metro doesn't wish to take any chances with this actor, whom someone dubbed "another Taylor," and they have refused to loan him or allow another studio to sign him. He made the flicker "Show Them No Mercy" for Twentieth Century-Fox and they would like to give him a contract.

The funniest flicker of the season is "Libeled Lady," and there is a great piece of business in it which you may miss. When Jean Harlow locks her bedroom door to keep out William Powell and drops the key down into her bosom the sound department has dubbed in a clunk sound, as when a key bounds against a rock.

* * * *

The other afternoon I sat in a projection room with Director Henry Hathaway and watched the first rough print of the Mae West flicker, "Go West, Young Man." The picture started at 2 in the afternoon and ran until about 5 o'clock, which should give you an idea of how much overlength the first rough print is. This is the purpose of the screening; to get it down to regulation size.

First Lady Commences Conferences

Only One Event Listed on Social Calendar of White House.

By Marylyn Reeve.

The White House, which had its usual crop of visitors yesterday morning, was the scene of Mrs. Roosevelt's first conference of the season and the last one until after election.

Outside, the sightseers walked about laughing at the now famous white squirrel, who chattered back at them in the friendliest way, or stood staring at the Alice blue scaffolding on the front of the Executive Mansion.

Little signs warned of wet paint.

Inside, everything was in order, all of the electric wiring on the first floor having been completed and the fixtures returned to their places against newly cleaned silk brocade walls.

The First Lady was a most gracious and unhurried hostess to her gathering of scribes, despite the fact she and the President were to board the noon train. Mrs. Roosevelt had on a severely smart blouse of black satin, fashioned with a high turn-over collar of gold satin. Her skirt was of black knobby crepe. She also wore a most interesting necklace. Suspended on a long carved gold chain was a medallion of rich yellow gold which had been found in Mayan ruins in Mexico.

Although accompanying her husband on the entire campaign tour, and again on a two-day trip in New England, she will not make any campaign speeches. Upon her return she will give some non-political talks in and near New York. If, while on this trip, covering ten States in as many days, the route goes near Fort Worth, Tex., Mrs. Roosevelt will go by plane to pay a brief visit to her youngest grandson, Elliott.

There is only one social event on the horizon and that is the visit of Mme. Jusserand, widow of the late French diplomat. On November 7 there will be the dedication of the handsome marble bench in Rock Creek Park, in memory of M. Jusserand.

Mme Jusserand has been invited to stay at the White House during her visit here, but there has not been time for her answer. Other than that, there is not a hint of social activity. There will be no plans for White House parties until after the election, and, as the embassies and legations wait for the First Lady's schedule before listing their formal functions, Washington will have to depend upon the debutantes and the members of the younger set to keep the society ball rolling.

Bust Presented To Smithsonian At Ceremonies

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Mr. V. A. L. Mallet, C. M. G., Chargé d'Affaires of the British Embassy, headed the list of speakers yesterday afternoon at the luncheon of the English Speaking Union in the Willard Hotel at which the union presented a bust of Lord Kelvin to the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Mallet was not present as she will not return from England until Tuesday, when Mr. Mallet will go to New York to meet her. Other members of the British Embassy, however, attended the function. Among them were Mr. Philip Manwaring Broadmead, and Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw, Assistant Naval Attache, with Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw and their daughter, Miss Eve Mark-Wardlaw. Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw wore a silk crepe dress of gray, printed in little bow knots of a lighter shade, and her daughter a suit of black and white check and over her curls, a black hat trimmed with a green band.

At the same table sat Baroness Serge Korff, wearing a dusty-rose felt hat and a black dress with stitched revers of white, and her son, Baron Serge Alexander Korff, jr. Nearby were the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Close, the latter dressed in a black costume, becoming with her white hair.

At the table with Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey and Dr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price were the Deputy Chancellor of the University of Australia, Dr. P. Halse-Rogers, and his daughter, Miss Judith Halse-Rogers. With Mrs. Halse-Rogers and another daughter, Miss Lorraine Halse-Rogers, they are in Washington for a short stay. Dr. Halse-Rogers came to this country to attend the Harvard tercentenary.

Mrs. Bruce Wallace was busy with details of the occasion. She wore a red crepe dress and suede hat of the same shade. Among others were Mrs. Braddish Carroll, in a beige knitted suit and accessories to match; Miss Margaret Page, in a black crepe with which she wore a silver fox fur and a strand of pearls; Dr. and Mrs. George B. Tribble, she in black with a small off-the-face hat and a double silver fox fur; Mrs. George Arnold in a simple tailleur of black with a brimmed hat; Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, in a tricorn hat and a black dress with white silk braid collar.

Fort Myer Polo Player Weds Here

Couple Starts Honeymoon and Will Return for Residence Here.

A quiet wedding took place yesterday morning when Mrs. Frederika Geoffrey was married to Capt. Donald Galloway, U. S. A. The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Frederick Mertens, by the Rev. J. M. King. Only members of the family and a few close friends were present.

The bride was gowned in copper-colored satin, a small hat of bronze and copper satin and carried a spray of white orchids. Her attendants were Miss Cromwell and Miss Katherine Mertens. Miss Cromwell was attired in peacock blue satin and Miss Mertens wore steel gray lame. Both carried bouquets of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Edward T. Galloway, jr., of New York, acted as best man for his brother. Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast. Later Capt. Galloway and his bride, the latter costumed in gray, left for a motor trip. On their return they will make their home at 4900 Quebec street.

Mrs. Galloway is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Mertens, jr., of Cleveland Park. She attended the Immaculate Seminary, the Mount Vernon Seminary and Holton Arms School.

Capt. Galloway, a graduate of West Point, is now stationed at Fort Myer with the Third Cavalry. He is a member of the polo team which recently won the championship at Cleveland. His mother, Mrs. Edward T. Galloway, of New York, and another brother, Capt. Gerald Galloway, on duty at Mobile, Ala., came to Washington for the wedding and are stopping at the Shoreham Hotel.

Lois Jameson, Thomas Eliot Party Guests

Another in the series of affairs being given for Miss Lois Jameson and Mr. Thomas Eliot, who will be married tomorrow, was the small and very informal cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Mr. Eugene O'Dunn. Mr. O'Dunn lives with Mr. Steven Springarn in a bachelor apartment at 1727 H street.

Among the guests yesterday were several members of the wedding party, including four young women with whom Miss Jameson has made her home in Washington: Miss Barbara Donald, Miss Rachel Campbell, Miss Bettina Ripley and Miss Elizabeth Morrison. Miss Jameson wore a dark-green suit with a corsage of orchids and a small, brown felt hat.

Others present yesterday included Miss Barbara Wright, in a dark-brown suit; Miss Elsie Ekengren and Miss Laura Tuckerman, both in black; Miss Elizabeth Sibley, daughter of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce and Mrs. Harper Sibley, who also wore black, with touches of light green at the neck of her dress; Miss Mary Cowles, Mr. Walter White, Mrs. Evatt Barnum, Mr. John Drier, Mr. Olin Gasch, Mr. John Proctor and Mr. Charles Wyzanski, who will be an usher at the wedding; Mr. Minnix Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Wilson.

Civilians, Teams Enter Horse Show

Civilian teams as well as Chilean, Mexican and United States Army teams, will participate in the Inter-American Horse Show, for which members of society will assemble at the Meadowbrook Horse Show Grounds, October 22, 23, 24 and 25.

Winners of blue ribbons in former shows will be the entries in the interstate civilian team jumping event which is attracting the interest of many local sportsmen.

Virginia entries will include winners of blue ribbons in the Warrenton Horse Show tomorrow and Saturday, Maj. Frank L. Whittaker, in charge of the Inter-American show, has announced.

Boxes are being erected on the west side of the jumping arena and, in addition, reserved seats and bleachers will be ready to accommodate several thousand spectators.

MRS. ARTHUR COLVIN PERRY, who before her marriage yesterday was Miss Katherine Williamson Wicks. She is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Ross Frederick Wicks, of Newark, N. J.

Katherine Wicks Is Married Here To A. C. Perry

Reception Follows Church Ceremony; Couple to Visit England.

Aquamarine, the bride's birthstone and favorite color, was the motif of the wedding at 8:30 last evening of Miss Katherine Williamson Wicks, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Ross Frederick Wicks, of Newark, N. J., to Mr. Arthur Colvin Perry, of Washington and Austin, Tex. The ceremony took place at the National City Christian Church, the Rev. Raphael Miller officiating, assisted by the Rev. Paul Mansfield Spencer, of New York.

The bride wore a gown of opalescent satin made with a high cowl neck and long fitted sleeves. Her tulle veil was held by a cap of duchess lace which the bride's mother wore on her wedding day, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. She was given in marriage by her father.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Joseph L. Perry, of Washington and Miami, the bridegroom's sister-in-law, wore a gown of aquamarine slipper satin with a short train, and carried white chrysanthemums. Miss Margaret Finkenstaedt, of Washington, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert E. Kline, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md., Mrs. W. Osmun Harding, of Short Hills, N. J., and Mrs. Gerald P. Flood, of Washington. They were gowned in aquamarine frocks similar to that of the matron of honor and carried white chrysanthemums.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, whose secretary the bridegroom once was, served as best man. The ushers were Mr. Joseph L. Perry, of Washington and Miami, the bridegroom's brother; Mr. Robert E. Kline, jr., of Chevy Chase, Md.; Mr. Murray S. Kiese and Mr. Gerald P. Flood, of Washington.

A reception at the Mayflower followed the ceremony. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Williamson, of Pelham Manor; Mrs. Pliney W. Williamson, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Mrs. Ellsworth Myers, Mrs. Frank Norman and Mr. Egbert Bodell, of Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry will sail tomorrow for a honeymoon in England. On their return, about the middle of November, they will reside in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Hay, Jr., Off On Bermuda Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Hay, jr., who were married Wednesday, sailed yesterday aboard the Kungsholm for Bermuda. On their return they will live in Washington.

Mrs. Hay, the former Miss Nena Buckner, daughter of Mrs. William Langhorne Buckner and the late Mr. Buckner, was married at the Washington Cathedral by the Rev. George Dudley. The bride was attended by Miss Mabel Hord. Mr. James McMahon was best man. Mr. Hay is the son of Mrs. R. L. Sonne, of this city, and Mr. Malcolm Hay, of Fort Plain, N. Y.

The Merry Whirl

By MARYLYN.

Neddie, attired in a Scotch plaid collar, has gone aroaming. No one knows just where he has gone, and that is the whole trouble. Washington is not just the place for a bright young cocker spaniel of 6 months to go wandering, unescorted. Owner Ned McLean has started on a real searching expedition and is leaving no stone unturned in his effort to find the little faun-colored pet.

Vilette Sullivan had a nice-sized thrill yesterday as she sat at her Red Cross enrollment desk at the Carlton. Up to her "office" walked a trim, black-clad figure—Mrs. Cary Grayson. With her was, of course, the admiral. She enrolled herself and two of their sons in order to keep up with the head of the house of Grayson, who needs no enrollment in the organization that is so near and dear to his heart and which receives so much of his attention.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman is a very busy person. Last night she dashed over to Baltimore to be on the speaker's platform when Mr. Frank Knox addressed the Republicans of the Maryland city. Today she is off again, this time for Philadelphia, and accompanied by debutante daughter, Alice, who is to attend some debuts this afternoon. Apparently the Quaker City has beaten Washington in starting off the doings of the younger set.

Saw Mrs. Charles E. Saltzman on California street. She had on a chic dark blue and white printed frock and dark blue hat. To ward off the chill of the early morning, she wore a losely woven gray coat. She will be joined here early next month by her sister, Miss Virginia Eskridge, who is tarrying on in Dorchester, Mass., before coming down to Washington to take up her abode at the Brighton. We suspect that she is remaining in the New England State to vote.

Those who stand by the old adage of—killing two birds with one stone—have nothing on Win Brown and Cole MacFarland. Win, just back from a glorious summer at her mother's New England home, and looking quite fit for a busy season here, and Cole have discovered they can mix up a brandy omelet, set it afire and toast marshmellows over it, thus, with one fire they cook two concoctions.

Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Stellita, stopped in the Mayflower lounge for some food for thought and a bit of refreshment. As they waited for their drinkables, each brought out a newspaper, sat back and carefully scanned the columns. Then, with the arrival of the two tall tinkling glasses, they tucked aside the papers and apparently swapped gleanings. Mrs. Stapleton was in black with a silver fox, while her daughter was costumed in rust and green.

Helen Fish plans to stay here for a time at least, and has set up housekeeping for her brother, South. They have a most attractive little apartment, curtains up 'n' everything. When Helen wrote her mother down South of her intention of keeping house, Mrs. Fish promptly wrote back she could do so only on condition the two youngsters go out for their meals. She wanted to be sure, she wrote, that they got enough to eat, for after all, two people with healthy appetites would be a considerable problem to one who had never tried to light a gas stove, or any kind for that matter.

When Bill and Jack Kerkam and their wives moved into homes practically next door to each other after the Jack Kerkam's marriage last summer, they started something. "Billie" Taber and Bob Gardner, who will exchange vows at the altar on November 27, are building a wee home in Chevy Chase, just across the street from brother Walter Gardner's home.

Reception Set By Mrs. Roper

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, will entertain members of the Baltimore Conference Home Guild and other visitors of the Baltimore conference now in session at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South at her home on Woodland drive today from 4 to 6 p. m.

Assisting Mrs. Roper in receiving will be Mrs. Edwin D. Mouzon, of Charlotte, N. C., wife of the presiding bishop of the conference; Mrs. A. W. Mears, of Baltimore, president of the guild; Mrs. Edgar C. Beery, wife of the presiding elder of the Washington district; Mrs. Ida R. Groover, of Washington, vice president of the guild, and Mrs. H. M. Wilson, wife of the superintendent of the home at Gaithersburg.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, of Francis Asbury Church; Mrs. W. F. Hummer, of Epworth Church; Mrs. Horace E. Cromer, of Emory Church; Mrs. E. E. Stacy, of St. Paul's Church; Mrs. C. C. Burruss, of Marvin Church; Mrs. W. D. Keene, of Calvary Church; Mrs. D. J. Orcutt, of Mount Rainier Church, and Mrs. C. G. Koonce, of Mount Vernon Church.

Mrs. Marvin Hostess.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, wife of the president of George Washington University, will be hostess to the Faculty Women's Club at her home, 2439 Tracy place, at 2:30 p. m. today. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, will be speaker.

Thrift Shop Board Plans Celebration

The board of directors of the Thrift Shop will entertain at a housewarming next Thursday from 3 to 6 at their new headquarters at 425 Tenth street. This well known charitable organization moved into a more spacious building last June from 1011 E street, its former location.

Included in the organizations which receive aid from the Thrift Shop are the Children's Hospital, the Child Welfare Association, the Children's Country Home, the Prenatal Clinic and the Junior League.

Miss Dwight Selects Oct. 31 as Bridal Date

Miss Mary Dwight, daughter of Mrs. John Henry Dwight, has selected October 31 as the date of her wedding to Mr. John McAfee Preston, son of Mrs. Vivian Gabriel, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., and the late Louis Butler Preston.

The ceremony will take place at 4 p. m. at Epiphany Church and will be followed by a small reception at the Sulgrave Club.

Is the Mode

In view of this season's discussions of fashion influences . . . the Empire, the Victorian, the Elizabethan, the Directoire, and other periods . . . one might easily find it difficult to distinguish what is truly fashionable from what may prove to be only a passing fancy. It is reassuring, therefore, to consider that the fashions selected for presentation by Erlebacher constitute the mode as it is accepted by the smart world. Here you may choose from countless styles, each equally correct.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Who Is Lonely for Beaux, and Also Wants Close Girl Friend, Asks How to Obtain the Same.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It's come to the point where I feel I must have help, from someone like you. It's the same problem: why am I not more attractive to the opposite sex? First, let me list my good points: nice slender figure, wear my clothes well, not a bad dancer, and am taking ballroom dancing lessons this fall. Yet, I'm certainly not rushed. It makes me very indignant to read what some of these men have to say of the scarcity of nice girls to go with. While the boys are out with the other kind of girls, we nice girls are sitting home reading or something, craving to have more good times and the companionship of men.

• • • •

I'm free, white and 21, and surely enjoy going in for real fun; enjoy any form of amusement from a Western cowboy picture to a lovely Beethoven symphony. Nevertheless, here I sit! When I do go out, I acquesce with the boy's suggestions as to where to go; if necessary, lesten to his every word; laugh like the dickens at his jokes; am interested in whatever he is interested in, be it automobile engines or philosophy; am never extravagant on his pocketbook; don't make a practice of calling boys on the telephone, but never seem to make the social grade. What is wrong?

• • • •

I don't care about drinking, but rather than apologize continuously for not imbibing, I do take a drink occasionally. When I see other girls who are very unattractive, not even pretty, having all the beaux they want, I begin to wonder what's wrong with me. If I were homely or had a bad figure, I could understand, but as it is, I simply can't. I don't go in for kissing and petting, so that seems to be the only clew to my unpopularity that I can find. Sometimes, fellows seem to sort of "shy away" when they find I live at home. They ask when my parents go out. My parents certainly aren't a detriment to my having company. When they're in they always find some other room in which to read.

• • • • •

Please, Miss Haworth, print this soon and help me if you can. Tell me where I can meet some fellows and if you know some girl about my own age, not well acquainted here, and who wants a close girl friend, I should like to meet her. Thank you so much. PEGGY.

Some Suggestions.

DEAR PEGGY: Maybe you are too rubber-stampish in your reaction to your boy friends to make much of a hit with them. It's all very well to be an amenable, considerate, appreciative audience and companion, up to a certain point. But beyond that point you've got to register as a definite personality in your own right, with unexpected refreshing angles and quirks of mind and opinion and interests, if you expect your suitors to multiply and stick.

• • • •

A boy likes a girl who has a good time when with him, one who doesn't mind acting as if she was enjoying herself hugely. He likes to talk about the things he's interested in, of course; and to find in her an intelligent and sympathetic listener. But he also likes her to trot out a few subjects for discussion that she's interested in. He enjoys a girl who can swap opinions in a spirited way.

• • • •

Being easy on a boy's pocketbook isn't necessarily the surest road to his heart. Neither is kissing and petting. These things have a negative bearing on a girl's popularity or lack of it. Your trouble is probably that you try too hard to make the right impression. When you are out with a boy, you're probably working toward a repeat engagement, instead of giving yourself up to the hour's enjoyment and letting the future take care of itself.

• • • •

Unless you are a newcomer to the city, it's hard to understand why you haven't some close girl friends here. If you have nothing to do all day, I suggest that you either find a job or continue your education at some local institution of higher learning. Either pursuit would bring you into contact with both men and girls—and more contacts must be what you need.

M. H.

Problem of Poverty.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 19 and need some advice. I am not considered very friendly and, of course, don't have many friends. My mother is always after me about going out. She says I sit home too much for a girl my age. She also says I ought to try to meet more people. But being poor and not having things that other girls have, I keep away from the boys and girls I would like to go with.

• • • •

We only have one room. Do you think it would be all right to have my company there, or would you advise me to meet them elsewhere on the outside. The room I have is only a bedroom. Could I receive company there? Please tell me what to do. M. E. R.

• • • •

DEAR M. E. R.: Even though your one-room home is frankly a bedroom, there is no reason on earth why you shouldn't invite your girl friends there. The greatest handicap to your having much fun might be the constant presence of your mother at such close quarters. If you know any girls who might accept your invitations, you might send your mother to the movies once in a while, so you girls could have a confidential gab-fest of your own.

• • • •

If you expect to have young men friends, the room should be furnished studio fashion, with the bed masquerading as couch or divan. The bureau could be a writing desk, of the type which has four wide, deep drawers to hold your garments; or as a tall chest of drawers with brass candle sticks or other living-room bric-a-brac atop it. Even then, your beau wouldn't be exactly at his ease with your mother sitting in the next chair. But it would do as a place to receive him while you put on your hat before going out with him.

• • • •

If you are hospitable to girl friends, they might invite you to their larger homes in return, asking you to bring along your beau, if you have one. In this way you could have dates on evenings when the young man wouldn't have money to spend on dining, dancing or movies. M. H.

Child's Health Comes Before His Schooling

Physician's Advice Should Be Followed if He Is to Keep Well.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

JOHN had two serious illnesses in one year, and the doctor was opposed to his entering school again in the fall. John's parents were shocked at the thought of the boy's missing a year of school. He was 14 and beginning his college preparation. A year's absence from his class would delay his graduation, and separate him from his friends. Furthermore, how could he be kept occupied and amused for months of idleness?

Health must come first with a child. A year lost at 14 is a small matter compared with chronic ill-health later on. The double strain of recuperation plus school work may hinder a child's full development, or shorten his life. It is the duty of parents to give the children first the best physique possible, and after that the best education.

But education is not all a matter of schooling. There are many things that a child cannot get at school, and which may yet be of inestimable value to him in life.

If he lives in the city he can be given a daily investigation to pursue. Let him study the traffic problem, how the city is fed and housed, what kinds of museums are available to the public. A hundred questions will present themselves to an interested parent, and most of the trips will keep the child in the open air.

The country affords other opportunities. If the child has any interest in nature, this is the time to encourage it. Botany, zoology, geology and mineralogy offer sufficient variety to make an appeal to nearly every child. There is always the possibility that a youngster might like to take over some special project on the place and put it through on his own.

It is important to have a program and to get a child interested in it. If this is done, the child may end the year ahead of his class instead of behind it.

Craze for Beige Due to Continue In Spring Style

The color beige is a good bet for fall clothes because it is expected to hold its popularity into the spring. Spring woolens are expected to include beige tones which run from cream to banana yellow; also the classic yellow beiges and the more intense colors that deepen into light burnt toast. While yellow beiges will predominate, the bluse beiges may be seen in flannels for sportswear. There are also expected to be street prints with brown grounds to be worn under beige coats and as blouses for beige suits.

Plaid—For Youthfulness

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 8.

AMID THE WELTER of visiting queens and runaway daughters of the British top-drawer crowd and "flying mothers" that fills our eyes and ears these days, the quiet report that Aimee Semple MacPherson will arrive in this sinful city next week to try to save us from ourselves attracts little notice.

AIMEE McPHERSON.

Yet Sister Aimee, for all that she seems to have lost her zip and her firm grip on the devil's tail, remains an interesting and colorful creature. No longer the dictator of Angelus Temple in Los Angeles, she zealously heads East for another headlong assault on Satan's American capital, which certainly must be this gaudy, almost incredible town. She has never had much luck in the East. Godless Gotham insists on looking upon her as some sort of a movie house act, and a few years ago in Boston, however persuasively she exhorted and coaxed, few came forward save those brothers and sisters of her own party who had probably been saved dozens of times already.

I fear that Sister Aimee is doomed to fail yet again in her mission, for this village was never wilder and more set in its sinful ways than it is this fall. Theaters, night clubs, restaurants, film basilicas are reveling in the biggest business in years. Everyone who has any money at all is tossing it to the bow-bows and seems to be enjoying it. That rich voice will again be crying in our wilderness—and evil Manhattan will only hear Cole Porter's latest songs!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In spite of the fact that the Countess Barbara Hutton Etcetera recently announced that she was through with dangerous fasting for all time, she recently made the sad mistake of allowing herself to be snapped in a bathing suit at Monte Carlo. It displayed her almost painfully thin—you could hang pictures on her collar bones. Fatten up, Babs, ducky! . . .

• • • •

Speaking of the new Cole Porter songs for "Red, Hot and Blue," his new musical show, let me tip you off that one of them, "How'm I Riding? I'm Riding High!" as shouted by the great Ethel Merman, bids fair to be a worthy successor to "You're the Top" and "I Get a Kick Out of You." I slipped into a rehearsal before the troupe left for Boston to open, and Calliope Ethel nearly blew off the roof with it . . .

• • • •

Speaking of shouters, I always howl when I see the London papers refer to old Sophie Tucker, one of our best and loudest veteran entertainers, as "the celebrated American diseuse"—shades of Yvette Guilbert, Raquel Meller and the rest! But Sophie probably laughs the loudest, at that! . . . Indefatigable Anne Nichols is actually reviving "Abie's Irish Rose," that wonder show which opened just 13 years ago, ran 5½ years on Broadway and made Annie over a million! I wonder why on earth? She tried to get as many of the original troupe as possible, but with little luck! Three of the actors, in fact, have died . . .

• • • •

Peeping into the Ambassador Hotel garden at lunch time yesterday while the maitre d'hotel wasn't looking, I saw Mrs. Winfield Sheehan entertaining a party. Mrs. Winnie, of course, is that superb Viennese, Maria Jeritza, whose appearance in tights once hung them on the rafters at the Met. Maria seems to be all domesticity with the former movie producer now, but she's as stately and thrilling a sight as ever as she toys daintily with a wiener-schnitzel! . . . Peggy Joyce's transfer to London has proven a huge success. New York no longer gives her much of a tumble, but she's still a ball of fire in the British capital. I saw her at the Lyceum Theater there, looking really ravishing, smothered in violet orchids and wearing festoons of the old Joyce jools. She's even been hired for a show called "Professional June Bride." Nothing personal, I 'opes?

• • • •

At last I feel a chit of a girl again! Mrs. Lillian Frances Bishop, all of 83, is our oldest living newspaperwoman. She went out for a walk the other day, became confused, and was nearly mortified to death because she had to ask a copper the way home, bless her heart! Gosh, I'm lost half the time!

Mothers Urged To Read Poems To Youngsters

Carrie Sutherlin, of Arlington Hall Advises Them for Imagination.

By Elizabeth Young.

RAISE your hands, all you mothers who wish for your children a noble character, a lofty imagination, a precise and elegant command of the mother tongue So-o! The "ayes" have it.

Very well, then. The formula is simple. Read them poetry every night before they toddle off to their little beds.

The prescription is given by Miss Carrie Sutherlin, whose mission in life is spreading the gospel of poetry among sweet girl undergraduates. For nine years professor of English and poetry classes at Arlington Hall Junior College for Girls, Miss Sutherlin is eminently qualified to speak on poetry. She studied poetry and poets at the State College at Farmville, Va.; the University of Virginia, Peabody College at Nashville, Tenn.; Vanderbilt University, Chicago University, Cornell Universtiy and Columbia Universiyt. She took her bachelor's degree at Peabody and her master's at Columbia, and was recently made an honorary member of the National Council of Poetry.

Influence Powerful.

"The power of poetry for good in the home and its influence in the lives of children is immeasurable," says Miss Sutherlin. "I have observed that the individual's thought processes, his character and his life-long use of English is largely determined by the presence or absence of poetry in his life from his earliest impressionable age.

"Very decidedly do I advocate parents' reading poetry to their children every evening—or whenever possible. The youngest baby smiles an instinctive response to the rhythm of nursery jingles. A little later give him Stevenson's 'Garden of Verse,' Eugene Field's rhymes, Milne's verses. Read from your own mature favorites if you like, for even very young children pick up more from adult poetry than most of us realize."

In Miss Sutherlin's opinion, there are "few persons in the world who do not respond to verse," and she feels with Shakespeare that those few who don't are pretty questionable characters.

"'The man that hath no music in his soul . . . let no such man be trusted,'" she quoted, explaining that "the man who has no appreciation of poetry is the man Shakespeare was talking about.

Prophesy Confirmed.

"Look at Edwin Markham's prophetic 'Man With the Hoe!'" she exclaimed. "Brought out in 1890, we see the prophesy of that poem confirmed today in what's taken place in Russia and other countries with the uprising of the peasant classes. Look at Tennyson's 'Locksley Hall,' written a century ago! Do you recall those lines:

"'For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens filled with commerce . . . and there rained a ghastly dew

Miss Sutherlin's audience agreed with her that here was inpeccably accurate prophesy; then asked her what constitutes real and immortal poetry.

"Well," Miss Sutherlin replied, "first, let's say universality of appeal (though that is very patent and very trite); second, artistic form and content; and third, the quality of permanence." She says few women versemakers manage to measure up to all these demands.

She pronounced Elizabeth Barrett Browning "the greatest woman poet," praised Emily Dickenson as "a superb artist, but limited in scope," spoke of the frail spiritual quality of Christina Rossetti's verse and the rich lyrical beauty of Sara Teasdale's poems, and paused to reflect on the possibility of Edna St. Vincent Millay's and Elinor Wylie's names living centuries after them.

"Ye-e-s," she said thoughtfully, "I think some of the things they have written may be found in anthologies circulated a century or so from now."

An Authority on Poetry

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Everybody works or should. Industry—the backbone of our material and moral welfare—requires workers who are physically sound; whose health is in no wise jeopardized by occupational hazards.

American manufacturers are alert to the necessity of conserving and preserving the health of their employes, and physicians—particularly those attached to plants in which poisons or deleterious substances are used—are studying the subject intensively.

It is desirable to recognize, if possible, dangerous situations which are set up by special types of employment. We have no right to assume that headache, anemia, or bronchitis—which are widespread general conditions and may come on irrespective of one's trade—are associated primarily with occupation. On the other hand, we must admit that men laboring in a dusty atmosphere may exhibit an increasing amount of bronchitis. Furthermore, those who work in vapors may absorb poisons through the air that they breathe. For example, trichlorethylene and tetrachlrethylene may lead to liver damage and to the development of jaundice, while benzene may bring on a particular type of anemia.

Before the use of yellow phosphorus was prohibited in the manufacture of matches. Phossy jaw" (necrosis of the jawbone) was common among makers of matches. Tetrachlorethylene was employed to dissolve cellulose and serious types of illness followed frequently. As soon as this solvent was discarded the symptoms disappeared. Until a dozen or more years ago the majority of glazes used in potteries contained lead in a highly soluble form. Many cases of poisoning ensued. By treating the lead so as to render it insoluble, the hazard was reduced 90 per cent.

Sometimes a bad situation may be rendered harmless through proper ventilation. This means the removal of dust-laden air, performing certain operations in the presence of a forced draft, and the precipitation of particles by water sprays.

Skin diseases constitute a separate group of annoying conditions, but they are no more common among the general group of workers than among other members of a community. Nevertheless, it is well known that many chemicals may bring on a dermatitis so severe as to render the victim unable to use his hands.

Lead presents one of the most pernicious industrial problems. Whenever employes are in contact with lead compounds, fumes, dust, or the metal itself, cleanliness in the workroom and of the person must be enforced strictly. The hands should be washed frequently, particularly before eating. All should be encouraged to take warm baths daily and no food should be eaten inside the shop proper.

The diet should be high in calcium, and for this reason in many factories where lead is required it is common practice to provide each workman with a glass of milk in the middle of the forenoon and another in the afternoon. This aids in the storage of lead in a harmless form in the bones. Furthermore, exposed persons are encouraged to take a saline laxative at least once each week. All are examined for unusual susceptibility to the poison.

Lonely Woman Blames Plight On Youngsters

Sister, 'Put on Shelf' by Her Juniors, Advised to Form Own Circle.

By Margaret Wallace.

THE PROBLEM of the woman over 30 who wishes to enjoy life and not be "put on the shelf" by her younger sisters is one that has inspired a Washington woman to write a letter to this department.

DEAR MISS WALLACE: I am 31 years old. I dress well and have nice hair and have even been told that I am pretty. My sisters are younger (18 and 20), but I do not think they are any more attractive than I am.

"They are very rude. They seem to think that I am too old to be included in their parties. They do not even ask me to their dinners. I have not been living at home for several years as I have been working in New York.

"Now I have come home to stay and my parents live in another neighborhood and all of my friends have moved away. I never lived in Washington very long at a time, because I went to a college in a distant city. I really feel lonesome. Do you think it is polite of my sisters not to include me in their parties? Some of the men they invite are as old or older than I am. They even tell me not to come in the drawing room at tea time when they have guests.

"My mother is worried about it. She says I have the privilege of having guests myself. She has suggested giving a tea for me, so that I can meet people. She says many of her friends have young daughters of my age who have a very good time and would like to entertain for me. Do you think this would be a good plan?"

ANSWER—I think it would be a very good plan for your mother to give a tea for you and introduce you to other young people of your age.

Your sisters are very rude. There is no reason why you cannot go into the drawing room when there are guests for tea. It is not polite for them to give dinners in the same house in which you are and not invite you, especially as the men they invite are of your age. But, of course, you will probably be happier if you make friends of your own.

Reducers' Salad Party

ARE ALL your friends reducing? How they'll sing your praises if you serve this delicious salad-luncheon—adding up to only 475 calories per person.

First serve tomato juice cocktail, then this fascinating salad plate: Asparagus Bellevue, carrot savories, curled celery, radish roses and Spanish sippets. For dessert have apple snow, hermits, coffee.

Carrot savories are cross-wise slices of carrots, topped with cottage cheese mixed with parsley. To make Spanish sippets, cut bread into strips about 1 inch by 4 inches by one-half inch, dip these strips into milk flavored slightly with garlic, and bake them.

Asparagus Bellevue is a delicious jellied salad of canned asparagus tips, diced celery, consomme and stuffed olives, well-seasoned and served on crisp lettuce with mineral oil mayonnaise. One serving adds up to only 50 calories.

Where do you get the recipes for this salad and its accessories? You'll find them in our salad booklet.

Salads are your best friends when you want to reduce. Make those that are low in calories, and high in vitamins and minerals.

Rely on the right kind of salads to bring back youthful slimness and pep. There's a whole array of them with calories counted, in our 40-page booklet, "Salad, the Beauty Course." 45 hostess salads, satisfying main course salads, light and crisp ones to serve as incidentals. Reduce and enjoy it.

RA Dismissals

Latest Resettlement Administration personnel figures show that the dismissals are continuing, although at a slower rate than during the summer months.

Where 13,815 were on active duty on September 1, the first of this month found 13,424 on active duty, a reduction of 492. The average monthly personnel slash between the peak employment point in May and September 1, was more than 1,700.

In all there are 13,923 persons on the payroll at present but 600 of these have already received notices. About 100 of this group are in the District.

There are 11,030 active workers in the field and 2,893 in this city.

Veteran Messenger

William B. Harris who in his 41 years service with the Bureau of Internal Revenue, has served as personal messenger for 15 commissioners, will be given a retirement party today at which Commissioner Guy T. Helvering will present him with a gold watch and chain.

Harris was 70 years old last week and will leave today on leave prior to formal retirement at the end of the month. The first commissioner he served was John W. Mason; others were Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper, Robert Lucas, of Kentucky, and David H. Blair, local attorney.

A mild-mannered man, Harris has won popularity not only in the Bureau but among the colored organizations of which he is a member. For 25 years he has been the clerk of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church. For a time he was grand master of the colored Odd-Fellows in the District and is now exalted ruler of the local Elks.

The poker game between Jessica Buck and Edward J. Cox, of the Railroad Retirement Board Union, one of the expelled A. F. G. E. units, will be brought to a climax Wednesday night, Cox having called a lodge meeting for that night.

Scientists Return

In recent weeks the newspapers have been full of stories of discoveries of Smithsonian Institution scientists, of the largest human skull on record, by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of ancient barbecue remains by Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., and Eskimo armor by Henry B. Collins, jr. The reason is that this is the time of the year when the Smithsonian scientists return from their summer wanderings bubbling over with new scientific discoveries.

An even dozen of the institution staff went science-hunting this summer and all but one, Capt. Charles Carey, who is studying firearm collections in Europe, have returned. Europe was also the happy hunting grounds for B. S. Bassler, head curator of geology at the museum.

Bassler studied European geological collections. Old World museums, being in existence longer, have older collections, but this country, Bassler, believes, is well ahead in arranging and exhibiting fossil remains to the public. Bassler brought back with him several thousand specimens of shells, corals and other ancient European remains.

Alaska was a most popular spot the band of scientists, attracting t only Dr. Hrdlicka, whose Aleuan adventure was recounted in this column two weeks ago, but Edward P. Henderson and Collins. Henderson dug for minerals on Prince of Wales Island, returning with an amazing collection of rare epidotes, a highly polished, blackish green mineral. Collins also worked on the island, his studies being directed toward unraveling the mystery of the origin of the Indian tribes.

Scientists working in this country were Gustav A. Cooper, studying rock strata in the Middle West; C. L. Gazin, collecting fossils in New Mexico; W. M. Perrygo collecting bird and mammal specimens in a secluded West Virginia mountain region; C. W. Gilmore, in charge of the institution's exhibit at the Dallas Centennial, and Roberts, who continued his third year of work on the Folsom man in northern Colorado.

Truman Michelson studied the Indian language in northern Canada, and William D. Strong, archeological specimens in Honduras. Toward the middle of this month, Herbert W. Krieger is to start on an archeological expedition to the Bahamas.

Eleanor Nelson, of Labor Lodge, No. 12, of the A. F. G. E., is a non-member subscriber to "Merit," official organ of Babcock's United Civil Service Employes organization . . . Week-end low-cost excursions to New York City seem the rage this fall. There is a Democratic absentee voters excursion tonight and tomorrow afternoon, an A. F. G. E. all-expense week-end tour over the week-end of October 16 and now comes the notice announcement of a Farm Credit Club Halloween week-end excursion on Friday, October 30, at 5:20 p. m. Railroad fare for the Farm Credit tour is $6.85 . . .

The General Accounting Office Lodge of the A. F. G. E. will try to solve its internal difficulties at a meeting Monday night . . . Applications for the following positions will be accepted by the Civil Service Commission until November 2, cereal technologist, $3,800 a year, and associate pathologist, $3,200, Bureau of Plant Industry; industrial toxicologist, $5,600, Public Health Service and medical technician, $2,000, Children's Bureau, Department of Labor.

Forum Meets Tomorrow.

The next public meeting of the Cooperative National Forum will be held at the Twelfth Street Branch Y. M. C. A., 1816 Twelfth street northwest, tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. The Rev. E. C. Smith, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, will be guest speaker, his subject: "This Bewildered World."

Finnish Art and Handicraft to Be Exhibited

Finnish Art, Handicraft Exhibit To Be Shown at Capital Store

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt and the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper will be among honor guests attending the preview today of the exhibit of Finnish art and handicraft, which will be open to the public tomorrow on the second floor of Woodward & Lothrop's.

Brought to this country by Louise Bonyhard, who was named commissioner of the exhibit, the collection contains more than 10,000 pieces, representing the evolution of Finnish arts and crafts from the primitive ages.

Exquisite glass, fine textiles, hand-chased pewter, wood carvings and dolls dressed in costumes characteristic of different parts of Finland are included in the collection, which is the first of its kind ever to be shown in America. It also includes a complete sporting exhibit consisting of skis, javelins, discuses and running shoes.

"We consider the glass collection one of the most important parts of the exhibit," Bonyhard said yesterday. "Every piece is indicative of the high standard of our industries. To obtain incredibly fine and delicate-looking glass is the aim of all our glass makers. Factories in Finland still use wood firing to make the glass very resistant to damage. The beautiful, silvery tone of the glass is further indication of its fine quality. The exhibit includes one large punch set of amber crystal that is especially outstanding. It was designed by Karhula, one of the foremost designers of glass in our country."

Bonyhard also pointed out that artists consider the wood-carving section of the exhibit one of the finest. "The most remarkable pieces were sent by Lepola, foremost wood sculptor in Scandinavia," he said.

The exhibit will be shown free to the public. It will open tomorrow at 9:30 a. m.

Among those who have accepted invitations to attend the preview today, and the luncheon that will precede it, are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bacher, Dr. C. G. Abbot, Dr. and Mrs. A. C. Christie, Melvin C. Hazen, Father Edmund A. Walsh, Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, Miss Vella Winner, Dr. C. F. Bowerman, Mrs. Grace Wickers, Eugene Meyer, Donald Woodward and Robert L. Parsons.

Two Here Lose Auto Permits In Speed Cases

29 Other Drivers Allotted Suspensions Ranging From 15 to 45 Days

Automobile-operating permits of two Washingtonians were revoked yesterday because they had been convicted of driving at excessive speeds.

They were Harold E. Caldwell, of 2615 Seventeenth street northeast, 55 miles an hour, and Richard W. Westwood, of 4450 Greenwich parkway, 55 miles an hour.

Permits of 29 others were suspended for periods ranging from 15 to 45 days.

Forty-five days suspensions:

John A. Delathouder, 2120 P street northwest, 44 miles; Edwin J. Ellison, 2311 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, 45 miles, and George W. Offutt 3d, 3433 Wisconsin avenue northwest, 44 miles.

Suit May Bring New Dividends Of Closed Banks

Possibility that depositors and creditors of two closed Washington banks, District National and Commercial National, will receive substantial additional dividends from the banks was foreseen in District Court yesterday when Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat refused to dismiss action brought by receivers for the banks.

The ruling came in a suit to recover from the Philippine government funds totaling $4,250,000 which were paid out when the banks closed. The two banks are seeking $1,753,000 while receivers of the Guardian National, of Detroit, claim $1,500,000 and the receiver of the Bank of Pittsburgh National Association is demanding refund of $1,000,000.

The Philippine funds were guaranteed by the depositories by posting securities with the Secretary of War, who was trustee for the deposits. When the banks closed, the securities were sold and proceeds applied to payment of the deposits. Thus, the Insular Government was paid in full, while other depositors of the banks obtained only fractional amounts.

Recent high-court opinions have held that national banks exceeded their charter rights when they guaranteed special accounts by the posting of securities.

Terrier, Bitten, Loses in Battle, Then Disappears

Ben Bolt is missing, and Mrs. David B. Wills, his mistress, has gone so far as to enlist the entire neighborhood, Boy Scouts, children and the policeman on the beat to find him.

Ben Bolt, a Boston terrier, ran away Tuesday after having had a fight with a dog about twice his size. He was bitten in the neck as he lost the decision.

Maybe this had something to do with his disappearance. At any rate, everyone is trying to find the dog, which lives at 2359 Ashmead place with his mistress.

Caesar wandered away and was last seen at the Fifth and K streets market.

Dairy Chiefs Are Granted Delay in Suits

Dismissal of Actions on Four Grounds Asked by Government.

Faced with a series of affidavits attacking their legal rights to question the constitutionality of the "milk control regulations as they were promulgated for the local area, a group of nearby Maryland and Virginia milk producers yesterday sought, and obtained, postponement of a hearing on their suits in District Court.

The producers, through a battery of attorneys, asked for postponement until Monday. They wished the delay, it was said, in order to prepare affidavits in answer to the ones filed yesterday by the Government, all of which came from officials of the Department of Agriculture and A. W. Gaunmetz, chief of the dairy section of the agricultural adjustment act.

In the affidavits, the Government asked the dismissal of the suits on four principal grounds. First, it said, the regulations do not provide penalties for the producers and secondly, it was charged, the producers could suffer no financial injury since the regulations fixed only a minimum price and did not attempt to set a maximum price.

A third line of attack was based on the allegation that the dairies dealing with the producers have not said they would not pay the prices fixed in contracts with the producers, although the producers contended their contracts would be impaired if the "milk code" was allowed to stand.

The fourth point raised was that the producers had an ample remedy by lawsuits if they suffered any damages and should not at this time seek an injunction to block enforcement of the code. Justice Oscar R. Luhring agreed to the postponement when the Government offered no objection

Marauder Is Shot By Watchman, 69, But Makes Escape

Samuel V. Mace, 69, who has been a watchman for the contracting firm of Warren F. Brenizer for the past 25 years, had an opportunity to use his pistol last night. Two intruders in the company's shop at 1501 South Capitol street failed to heed his command to halt.

Mace fired at one of them. He fell. The watchman started in pursuit of the other, who eluded him. He returned to find the wounded man gone.

The watchman said that within the last few days the shop had been entered several times by thieves, who stole some aluminum. On Wednesday night he and two policemen waited for the maurauders, who failed to turn up.

Battling 'Catfish' Proves Shark, Pan Angler Finds, Landing Haul

Father of 10 Has Visions of Huge Fry as He Fights Quarry; Experts Are Puzzled How Sea Tiger Invaded Potomac.

James L. Kenney, who fishes not for the sport but because he has ten children to feed, thought he was pulling in a catfish yesterday but it turned out to be a shark and almost scared the colored truck driver to death.

Bureau of Fisheries officials marveled at the catch because never before has a shark been found as far up the Potomac River as Three Sisters Island. And that's where Kenney had his line, the hook, decorated with dough bait consisting of white flour, salt and pepper, and oyster broth.

For 12 years Kenney, an employe of the West Bros. Brick Co., in South Washington, Va., has been pulling fish out of the Potomac.

"But this was the worst fight I ever had," he told Fred G. Orsinger, director of the Commerce Department aquarium.

He took the ugly 2½-foot haul down to the aquarium for identification after fish merchants along the wharves had shaken their heads gravely when Kenney asked them what this thing was.

Dr. Isaac Ginsberg, Bureau of Fisheries salt-water ichthyologist, determined the specimen was a male ground shark (Charcarhinus milberti) and expressed amazement that it had been found so far distant from the sea.

"Now you can take it home and feed it to the family," Dr. Ginsberg and Orsinger told Kenney.

"Oh, no suh," he pleaded. "Ah don't eats what I never ate before."

He confessed being "quite scairt" when the hooked fish, which he thought was an oversized "cat," put up a terrific struggle, but the truck driver displayed even greater concern when informed he had been battling a shark.

Looking at the creature's sharp teeth, he wriggled his fingers unconsciously and mused:

Change Attitude After Holding Conference With Ruhland.

Safeguarding of Public Funds Is Assured by Agreement.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday expressed satisfaction at the change in the position of the District Medical Society on his request for $500,000 to build two health centers.

The society announced it had decided to indorse the health centers after a conference with Dr. Ruhland subsequent to the public budget hearings at which it opposed the centers.

"During the conference," the society said, "it was brought out that the health centers were for the purpose of giving adequate and much-needed housing facilities for already established agencies of the Health Department, for supplementing existing deficiencies in established hospital clinics, and for housing the social service personnel previously requested and indorsed by the society.

"The fact that the care of the indigent at Gallinger Hospital is rendered, to an extent, futile by lack of sufficient co-operation for adequate full time personnel was deplored.

"Safeguarding of public funds was assured by agreement to utilize the facilities of the central admitting bureau to determine each applicant's eligibility for free treatment."

Dr. R. Arthur Hooe, who appeared for the society at the budget hearings before the District Commissioners, said the society felt the money requested could be spent more efficiently for more equipment and personnel for hospital clinics.

The Commissioners, it is understood, have approved one of the health centers in the supplemental estimates, which are dependent upon the acquirement of additional municipal revenue.

MartinelliGives Recital Tonight To Aid Hospital

Parts of Proceeds Will Be Used to Buy Equipment for Homeopathic.

Little Tommy Tucker sang for his supper, but Giovanni Martinelli tonight will sing for a bigger cause—fresh plaster and paint and surgical supplies for National Homeopathic Hospital.

A portion of the proceeds from the operatic tenor's recital in Constitution Hall will be turned over to the institution to replace worn out equipment and renovize rooms needing repairs. Homeopathic Hospital, at Second and N streets northwest, is one of the oldest in the Capital. Even the nursery needs painting and plastering.

Members of the hospital board and Superintendent Elizabeth Dempsey Coleman expected numerous improvements can be made possible by the concert.

The hospital was founded on June 10, 1881. After having occupied several temporary sites, the present location was acquired in 1886. The nursing school was established in 1893 and the nurses' home was erected in 1915 by the late William E. Barker as a memorial to his wife, a graduate in the class of 1908.

Mrs. Clarence Dodge, Walter S. Pratt, Jr., Frederick Kerby, Robert Smith, J. B. Gregg Curtis, Delos Smith, Fred McKee, T. Janney Brown, Kenneth D. McRae, Mrs. Clarence G. Allen, Mrs. Sidney Andrews, Mrs. Wyeth P. Baker, Mrs. John L. Barr, Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall, Mrs. J. Holmes Branson, Miss Mary Branson, Mrs. S. M. Broslus, Mrs. Tomas Calinas, Mrs. Frank R. Cogswell, Mrs. Emmet G. Coiner, Mrs. Samuel T. Conkling, Miss Mabel Crissey, Miss Mildred Curran, Mrs. James F. Davidson, Miss Mary G. Fox, Mrs. George A. Gordon, Mrs. W. A. Gotlieb, Mrs. Ella H. Hayes, Mrs. Nelson T. Harlson, Mrs. John W. Guider, Mrs. M. H. Latta, Mrs. Thomas Leslie MacDonald, Mrs. Peter McClusky, Mrs. Cortland H. # Tremaine Band May Have Long Club Run Here

Organization Is Popular at Cocoanut Grove; Revues Feature Night Spots.

By Chanticleer.

Paul Tremaine evidently will be able to name his own ticket at Cocoanut Grove—that is, he'll be in town just about as long as he chooses. Patronage records at the K street night club have gone soaring since the maestro and his orchestra have been there.

The fact Tremaine hasn't been so active on the radio networks in the last few months doesn't detract a bit from his ability—and the Grove has the distinction of having a name band ranked up with the top-notchers, which is something new and novel in the home precincts.

This week Cocoanut Grove also goes overboard with two dance teams instead of the conventional one: Gillette and Richards and Scott and Douglas. Little Kitty Simons is the home-town contribution, and Kitty's doing very well, thank you.

The fall opening at the Russian Club Volga Boatman isn't over, despite the fact it took place last Tuesday night. Host Matt Windsor has delivered in every way on that promise to make the Theater Intime a real extravaganza of Russian artistry. Tuesday night's opening-night patrons should be very busy spreading the word about. Being a little weak on my Russian names, I can't attempt the proper spelling of the barytone who took the Tuesday night crowd by storm. He's very swell. For that matter, the entire production of Ivan Borisoff is grand entertainment. You'll want to see for yourself. No extra charge at the Boatman for dinner guests who remain after 10 p. m. Luncheon from 12 to 3 daily, too.

• • • •

That fellow who makes the glasses fairly ring with his syncopated piano and tenoring at Maryland Club Gardens (Crystal Bar) is Joseph Wagstaff. He's a genuine wandering troubadour, having sung and played his way completely around the world. In two weeks he hasn't missed a request!

Orlick and Lolick, Russian dancers, have been scheduled for that grand opening at the Russian Troika next week. In case you've forgotten, they became famous for their interpretation of the "Blue Bird" ballet from "Aurora's Wedding." Their work is not entirely classical, however.

• • • •

Johnny Rice and his orchestra have been playing in Washington for more than seven years. As you know, they're at Brinkley's . . . Even losers must eat! Meaning that the crowds stopping at the Dude Ranch for dinner can't all be Laurel winners. Nothing to take one's mind off the cash dropped on a nag like the Dude Ranch's rhumba team, Katis and Ray . . . For excellence in steak and chicken dinners, down t'other way, try Boulevard Farms, just below Alexandria on the Memorial highway.

The Willard Corner celebrates its anniversary today. What a year it has been in that blue and silver Getz is welcoming his Washington friends at the Getz establishment in Baltimore, where he features a New York revue and the spotlight brightest on Norma Norton.

• • • •

It's Judy Ellington week at the Lotus. Bill Strickland's vocalist is celebrating her second anniversary—with assistance from Al Norton and all the other Lotus personalities. The floor show is headed by the Paul Florenz revue.

• • • •

No Monday night blues at Ol' Massa Pete Macias' Heigh Ho. No, sir, not when those National Theater Monday night crowds have the Heigh Ho habit, following the final curtain. The Heigh Ho walls resound with what is known in sports parlance as "Monday morning quarter-backing." Veteran first-nighters gather 'round to discuss the production, the stars and—mayhap the playwright. Not infrequently those discussed turn up to have their word.

• • • •

Dancing, it should be mentioned, is the chief diversion of the members of the One-to-Two Club at the Shoreham, referred to a day or so ago . . . A new revue romps into the spotlight at La Paree today, but Lew Fink and Ben Alley will continue to gag and direct, respectively. Manhattan Varieties, the revue, brings along with it a line of girls of well-advertised pulchritude.

To its array of attractions the merry rainbow room of the Hamilton Hotel adds another—and this time it's peanuts!

It's all part of Lew Berman's new and original "Nut" song. Lew, the singing drummer with the rainbow room orchestra, is introducing the song to Washington and during the chorus he passes out goobers to dancers passing the band platform.

Dick Butler wants it known, too, that the best sequel to peanuts, and the most satisfying, is the famed Hamilton Old-Fashioned.

Drowning Man Saved After Channel Plunge

Charles W. Anderson, 30, of 1834 Columbia road northwest, was saved from drowning yesterday when he was pulled from the Washington Channel shortly after he is alleged to have leaped from the sea wall near the Flood Gate Bridge.

He was pulled from the water by Charles W. Syron, who lives on the Sea Wolf, anchored near the Flood Gate. Abraham Bulter, of 314 G street southwest, told police he saw the man jump into the water.

$10,000 Bond Fixed In Shooting Case

Frank H. Acton, 35, of the 800 block Seventh street southwest, pleaded not guilty and asked for a continuance until October 20 when he was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

The charge was filed against Acton Wednesday after he is alleged to have confessed to police the shooting Sunday night of Donald E. Mersch, 29-year-old salesman.

Acton appeared in court without counsel and informed the court he would act in his own defense. He said the complainant (Mersch) was still confined to the hospital and could not appear. Judge Walter J. Casey set a $10,000 bond.

Acton is charged with having shot Mersch at Eleventh and E streets southwest during an argument over money. Mersch was struck in the abdomen and shoulder by three bullets. His condition is regarded as serious in Emergency Hospital.

Car Rider Found Dead Beneath Load of Steel

An unidentified colored man was found crushed to death in a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad car at Fourth and S streets northeast early yesterday by Alvin Sulcer, railroad brakeman.

The man's body was taken to the Morgue, where a small amount of change was found in the pockets. There were no identifying marks to be found. Police said the car was loaded with steel which apparently had shifted, pinning the colored man underneath.

On the Air Today

Two of the National Broadcasting Company's prize sustaining hours return to the air today. At 2, Dr. Walter Damrosch conducts the season's inaugural of the Music Appreciation Hour, WMAL. The program is a real pioneer, this being the ninth season. It is estimated that literally millions of pupils are reached.

The general plan of the former series will be followed except for slight variations—with four graded courses serving youngsters from kindergarten age through high school years.

At 3:30 (also WMAL) the Radio Guild presents its first play of the season, "The Pillars of Society." This Hendrik Ibsen drama was written in 1877—with a moral principle in the business world quite in step with modern affairs. Next week "Wings Over Westphalia" has been selected by the guild. A "no-star" policy is followed by N. B. C. in presenting this series. The starring actor and actress are selected from week to week from those best suited for particular parts required.

• • • •

Politics tonight: Secretary Ickes, WMAL, at 8:30 (in period usually filled by "Death Valley Days"); Gov. Landon, from Chicago, WRC, at 9:30 (in period usually filled by "True Story Court"); former Gov. Cox, of Ohio, WJSV, at 10, and Earl Browder, on "Social Security for America," at 10:45, WJSV.

• • • •

Here and there:

A tri-weekly program of organ music has been scheduled from the Rialto Theater by WRC, starting Sunday. Will feature Pearl Hauer, organist . . . WMAL will broadcast the winning play of the One Act Play Tournament, being conducted by the Community Center . . . Red Nichols, who brings his orchestral Pennies to the Earl this week, is really a radio veteran. They began broadcasting in 1926 and a year later Red was a staff conductor at WBAC in New York . . . "One Man's Family" is to be produced in movies as tentatively announced a few days ago. Paramount will make it, beginning about December 15. Practically all the members of the air cast will be in the movie version.

• • • •

Warren Sweeney is the fortunate announcer who is making the current junket around the country for Columbia with the Presidential party. The WJSV announcer went to Omaha yesterday and probably will be heard next week from Chicago when the President speaks . . . Mary Mason, WRC's "Home Forum" expert, is the owner of the voice of Nancy Bradford, heard in Lee Everett's "Old Timer" airings Tuesdays and Fridays at 9:15 a. m., WRC.

• • • •

From the mail:

An unsigned post card from New York City says: "Another 'gentleman calls to advise' that no commercial program has ever been conducted under the name of 'Cheerio' and no name has ever been officially announced as the real name of that broadcaster. The fact that people felt they recognized a voice does not change the situation. The Sonotone program is the debut of Cheerio under that name with a sponsor."

The card was marked "referring to your column of September 30." Something seems to tell me that the fellow who sent that card is pretty close to His Nibs, Cheerio himself!

And another says, in effect, that The Post ought to get real "newspaper boys" to do "Curbstone Queries" because Charley Stofberg and his partner sound like "high school boys." Tck! Tck! Is my face red? Old Timer, who signs the card, suggests that questions of the day be asked. Well, the Curbstoners do that, too. What the Old Timer doesn't know is that the next listener writes in and says: "Please don't use serious, topical questions. Use the funny ones and more gags." Heigh-ho, what to do, what to do!

Features today:

From the "Hindenburg"—Short-wave program from the Zeppelin, WMAL, at 1:30.

Tribute—To Mickey Mouse on his eighth birthday anniversary by Andrew Kostelanetz and orchestra, WJSV, at 8:30.

"Hollywood Hotel"—Begins its third year tonight with the honeymoon over and Dick Powell back in the cast, WJSV, at 9, by means of a "cut-in" from New York.

Jessica Dragonette—With Jones and Hare, guest stars of Radio Guide's show, WMAL, at 10.

J. H. H.

Cotton Report Of Oct. 1 Shows Larger Crops

Forecast of 11,609,000 Bales Is 488,000 Over September 1.

The Department of Agriculture reported yesterday that this year's cotton crop, as indicated by October 1 conditions, would be 11,609,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight.

A crop of 12,481,000 bales was indicated August 1 this year, and 11,121,000 bales were indicated on September 1. Last year's production was 10,638,000 bales and that of 1934 was 9,636,000 bales.

The condition of the crop October 1 was 61.8 per cent of a normal, compared with 72.3 per cent August 1 and 59.1 September 1 this year, 64.0 on October 1 last year, and 56.2, the 1923-1932 October 1 average.

Prices Hold Steady.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The Government October report indicating production of 11,609,000 bales or 488,000 above it's September estimate and 971,000 bales over the 1935 crop caused fluctuations over a range of 20 to 33 points in cotton today but final prices showed little net change. December rallied from 11.81 to 12.14 and closed at 11.85 with final prices steady, 4 points net higher to 3 lower.

The market opened barely steady at declines of 2 to 6 points but prebureau covering caused moderate rallies during the first hour.

| | High | Low | Last |
|---|---|---|---|
| October | 12.07 | 11.87 | 11.99 |
| December | 12.14 | 11.81 | 11.85-86 |
| January | 12.12 | 11.81 | 11.87 |
| March | 12.13 | 11.85 | 11.87 |
| May | 12.12 | 11.84 | 11.87-88 |
| July | 12.09 | 11.78 | 11.76-77 |

Spot, steady; middling, 12.30.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was irregular today. After showing losses of 3 to 6 points under scattered liquidation, prices rallied on renewed covering and commission house buying promoted by the action of the lard market.

The Government cotton crop report of 11,609,000 bales was ignored. Sales were 136 lots. Bleachable spot, nominal: October closed 9.93; December, 9.99; January, 10.06; March, 10.16; May, 10.30.

Balt. & Ohio to Repair 100 Locomotives

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—Because of the steady increase in freight traffic a locomotive repair job will be started this week in four of the principal shops of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

The reconditioning and repair of 100 freight locomotives are included in the program, which will call back to work a total of 725 shopmen at Baltimore, Cumberland, Pittsburgh and DuBois, Pa.

Reserve Balances Up to 1.95 Billion

By the Associated Press.

An increase of $126,000,000 in monetary gold stocks of Federal Reserve Banks, attributed primarily to European uncertainties prior to the devaluation of the franc, was reported last night by the Federal Reserve Board.

The inflow of gold resulted in a $122,000,000 increase in member bank reserve balances, bringing total reserves to $6,479,000,000. Excess reserves reached $1,950,000,000, as compared with $1,840,000,000 the previous week.

Under the stimulus of fall buying and seasonal increases in employment, money in circulation increased $39,000,000 to a total of $6,305,000,000.

Atlas Powder to Make Industrial Chemicals

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 8.—Extensive new manufacturing development plans of the Atlas Powder Co. were announced today by Leland Lyon, president of the company. The company is purchasing a large tract of land near here and construction will begin immediately on the first unit of a plant for the manufacture of industrial chemicals. The expenditure involved is approximately $1,000,000.

The first unit of the plant will be devoted to operations involving the electrolytic reduction of sugars to their corresponding higher alcohols. This opens up an entirely new phase of organic chemistry and marks the initial entry of the Atlas Powder Co. as a supplier of base materials in this field.

Brokers' Loans Drop $15,000,000 in Week

Loans on securities to brokers and dealers, held by weekly reporting member banks in New York City, were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have totaled $993,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday, a decrease of $15,000,000 for the week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $825,000,000.

France Reduces Rate Further To 2.5 Per Cent

Bank Reserve Rises 7 Billion Francs to 57.358 Billions.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 9.—The Bank of France lowered its rediscount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent today.

The reduction was the second since devaluation of the franc. Last week, when the bourse resumed operations, the rate was dropped from 5 to 3 per cent to facilitate the flow of capital into productive enterprise, following the cut in the gold content of the franc.

The rate on advances against securities was reduced from 4 to 3 per cent today and on 30-day loans from 3 to 2½ per cent.

The Bank of France, decreasing its discount rate to the lowest point during the regime of the Socialist Blum government, disclosed today a 7,000,000,000 franc ($359,424,000) rise in the value of its gold reserves.

In revaluing the national gold stock, the conversion was made on the basis of a franc containing 9 milligrams of gold, the minimum devaluation called for under the new currency law.

Devaluation 25.2 Per Cent.

(The old gold franc contained, by law, 65.5 milligrams, so that the value adopted in setting a figure on the gold stock was equivalent to a devaluation of 25.2 per cent.)

The latest statement of the Bank of France, which is as of October 2, showed gold holdings of 57,358,742,140 francs (equal to $2,844,944,000 based on francs of 49 milligrams gold) compared with 50,111,283,675 francs ($2,485,520,000 on the same basis) shown in the statement of September 25.

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Action of the Bank of France in decreasing its discount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent shortly after devaluation of the franc, follows the "easy money" practice of both the United States and Great Britain in their efforts to defeat the depression, banking experts said today.

Observers saw in Premier Blum's policy an effort to make money available to industry at low interest charges so industrial activity, long hampered by apparent lack of confidence in the government and lack of working capital, might return to normal levels.

New $10,000,000 Plant For Industrial Rayon

Cleveland, Oct. 8.—(AP).—Hiram S. Rivitz, president of the Industrial Rayon Corporation, announced today that construction of a new plant to cost up to $10,000,000 will be started soon on a site near Painesville, Ohio.

Rivitz said that at least a year will be required for completion of the building program. Plans for the plant are not yet completed and contracts probably will not be awarded for two or three months.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Stocks Move Irregularly in Less Active Trading With Strong Undertone; Wheat Higher.

New York, Oct. 8.—Financial markets looked calmer, prices continued to show much irregularity, sales volume in stocks was reduced, but the tone and feeling of the financial community was cheerful, in spite of the renewed war threats in Europe. Turnover in stocks dropped to around 2,250,000 shares. Government bonds were unsteady, but more speculative issues took care of themselves. Cotton was firm at the close in spite of a higher Government crop estimate. December wheat closed 1¼ cents higher at 114¼ cents a bushel.

Bullishness in Wall Street is obviously on the rise. Some of the more enthusiastic, and who also are "chart minded," have no qualms in predicting a market rise of from 10 to 15 points. Such enthusiasm usually comes up quickly after a few days of rising prices on expanding sales volume.

Many New Accounts.

Doubtless the opening of new accounts is doing more than anything else to lift the fog around the brokerage houses. Some of the larger houses report that in the past week or so they have been opening as many as a hundred new accounts daily—most of them cash accounts. Canvass of the district uncovers no important increase in marginal trading accounts, which is all to the good.

Mere switching from one stock to another is given credit for much of the recent increase in trading. Brokers say the return from vacations of many of their well-to-do clients is bringing an overhauling of accounts, with the adoption of new favorites and the dropping of the old. On the whole there seems to be a larger public participation in the stock market than at any time since last February.

Foreign business is still heavy, but today it was smaller than yesterday. Here and there profit-taking sales for French account are reported, but most houses doing foreign business find their clients on the other side have been buyers on balance, particularly those in London. The upturn in stock prices was started by foreign buying.

At New High Prices.

In view of the considerable switching of brokerage-house accounts, it was not surprising that the stock list continued to look irregular. A few groups were uniformly strong, but for the most part profit taking vied with new buying. Outstanding strength was shown in Chesapeake & Ohio on the increased dividends; in Chaseapeake Corporation, the chief beneficiary, and in the Allegany issues, which will profit from anything passed on by Chesapeake, and also from the market rise in that stock. The road shares shot up nearly 5 points and the Chasapeake Holding Co. shares jumped nearly 7 points. Other railroad stocks were inclined to weaken.

Oil stocks and the building and real estate issues moved into the favored column. Oils came forward in the afternoon, led by Standard, Texas and Indiana. Along with the rise in real estate issues, the cement shares hardened from 1 to 8 points. Public utilities again were more active, with preference shown for the low-priced issues, such as Commonwealth and United. Consolidated Edison rose to a new high price.

With the exception of Yellow Truck the automotive group was quiet. Metals were firm. Mail orders pushed on to new high prices, but farm implements were little changed. Rubbers strengthened. Douglas Aircraft dipped another 2 points. Gillette, Holander, Greyhound, Manati preferred, National Supply, Thatcher and Colgate were well liked. Manville dropped 3 points at the opening, but rallied well.

France Revalues Gold.

In the foreign exchanges sterling recovered a little and francs were kept to a narrow quotation range. The only new development was the cutting of the Bank of France's discount rate, from 3 per cent to 2½ per cent, and the receipt at Paris of a large amount of gold. Bank of France announced that it had revalued its gold stock, on the basis of the minimum devaluation suggested by the Government. This week's bank return shows gold holdings valued at $2,844,944,000 on the new basis, compared with $2,485,520,000 on the same valuation basis for the previous week.

It had been expected that abandonment of gold and devaluation would bring a large increase to the Bank of France's holdings. That has been the experience in turn of every country that has gone off gold and devalued its currency. Much of the gold doubtless came from private hoards, some from the British stabilizatfon fund releases, and the remainder from other countries, probably including Spain.

Cheap Money Policy.

The "profit" resulting from the write-up in the gold franc value no doubt will accrue to the French treasury, is it did before when France devalued, and will be used to liquidate the government's heavy debt at the Bank of France. Meanwhile the country is pushing on with its cheap money plans as a stimulation to domestic trade. The bank rate is down from the maximum of 5 per cent reached just before gold abandonment, and a loan has been made to the treasury for reduction of mortgage interest charged by the land banks.

French Withdrawals.

Bankers report that a modest repatriation movement in French funds is now under way, but the withdrawals apparently are leaving the money and short-term investment markets rather than the stock market. Brokers report a little increase in foreign buying on balance. In any event the French withdrawals are not as yet affecting even the money market, for the same bankers who have discovered the outward movement say it is more than offset by incoming funds from London.

Eventually, if stabilization is brought about without interruption because of war in Europe, the tendency will be for our money market to lose funds on balance, and for a considedable amount of gold to go back across the water. That is calculated to promote easy money abroad without hardening rates to any extent on this side. The real threat to easy money here is a rush of industry to borrow funds, a sharp rise in commodity prices, and an inflationary movement in the stock and commodity markets.

Good Idea.

On numerous occasions the Sun has pointed out the long delays granted by SEC to individuals in filing their monthly reports on trading in their own corporations. As a result, many of the reports have broken the spirit as well as the letter of the regulation. If an insider could delay a year, as some did, why not make it five? By that time no possible good reason for filing at all could be found. The criticism has appeared well founded, and the SEC is now preparing to crack down on the tardy ones.

Gen. Motors Sales Establish Record

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to consumers in the United States totaled 85,201 in September, the best for that month since 1929, the corporation reported today. Sales to consumers in the United States for September compared with 133,804 in August and 66,547 in September a year ago. Sales to consumers for the first nine months of 1936 totaled 1,346,915, a record high, and compared with 951,373 for the same nine months of 1935.

Davis Placed On Board of Clearing House

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Appointment of Floyd E. Davis, president, Lincoln National Bank, to membership on the Washington Clearing House Association committee, was announced yesterday by H. H. McKee, president, National Capital Bank, chairman of the committee. Mr. Davis succeeds the late George L. Starkey, former president, National Bank of Washington.

Mr. Davis has been president of Lincoln National Bank for more than 23 years. He was elected a director of that institution June 8, 1899, and became its second vice president, January 11, 1906. In July, 1899, and became its second vice dent. During his presidency, deposits of the bank have grown from $1,710,000 to more than $10,000,000.

Groom Promoted.

At the organization meeting of the board of directors of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, held this week, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Maurice D. Rosenberg, president; Thomas J. Groom, executive vice president and cashier; Joseph Sanders and Irvin Owings, vice presidents; Joseph H. Milans, secretary; George M. Quirk, auditor; Oliver B. Exline, Francis E. Robey and Will R. Swetnam, assistant cashiers.

M. D. ROSENBERG.

The foregoing represents the re-election of all former officeholders except in the case of Thomas J. Groom, who was elevated from the office of vice president and cashier to executive vice president and cashier, and the election of George M. Quirk to the office of auditor. The bank continues to make steady progress. Deposits of approximately $3,500,000 are at an all-time high and earnings for 1936 will be the best in the history of the bank, it was announced.

Linn Elected.

Comptroller Arthur J. Linn, of Hamilton National Bank, was elected first vice president of the National Association of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers at its recent convention in San Francisco, held there in connection with the meeting of the American Bankers Association. Mr. Linn formerly was second vice president of the auditors and comptrollers organization and has been a leader in the auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association since its inception.

Harris & Ewing.
A. J. LINN.

Mr. Linn gave a report on the convention at a meeting of the auditors' section last night at the Lafayette Hotel. Comptroller Raymond G. Marx, Riggs National Bank, spoke at the meeting at which Auditor Millard S. Yeatman, Hamilton National Bank, section chairman, presided.

A. I. B. Membership Drive.

Plans for a concerted membership drive of directors, officers and personnel of Washington banks were discussed at a joint meeting of the consuls and membership committee of Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, held Wednesday. Frances E. Robey, chairman of the membership committee, presided. Talks were made by President Paul J. Seltzer, of the chapter; J. Earle McGeary, chairman of its educational committee; Crawford Turnbull, chief consul, and William H. Laughlin, first vice president and chairman of the program committee.

An encouraging increase in student enrollment was reported and confidence was expressed that the year would show an appreciable membership increase. Reports on plans for the coming year were heard from chairmen of committees having activities of interest to members. The date of the annual banquet was announced as February 20. The first forum dinner is scheduled for November 18 and a subscription dance at the Willard Hotel for November 14. Dates for various other interesting activities will be announced in the near future. Interest and enthusiasm in the chapter and its work is evident in all Washington banks and financial institutions as each year shows student and membership gains.

Direct Mail Honor.

The Direct Mail Advertising Association, Inc., has just notified Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. that it has won a place as one of the 50 direct mail leaders in the United States and Canada for 1936. The "Your Assistant Salesman" mail advertising plan of pre-approach letter units successfully used by Acacia agents was the exhibit.

This is the fifth time in which Acacia has received this outstanding honor. Acacia first won in 1931, and again in 1933, 1934, 1935 and 1936. Acacia is the only life insurance company to have received the famous international direct mail advertising award five times. Troy M. Rodlun, advertising manager of Acacia, is a member of the local chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters and is secretary of the National Life Advertisers Association.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, October 8.—The stock market closed with an easier tone. Industrials again being the most active, although slight fractional declines were registered under profit-taking sales. Steel and copper issues advanced while oils and gold mining securities sold lower. Gilt-edged and transatlantic shares held steady and German bonds made slight gains.

Paris—Renewed selling resulted in a generally heavy tone in the bourse today. Rentes lost almost two francs and bank shares were likewise lower than Wednesday's close. Railroad and coal shares sagged and electrical issues remained steady.

Liverpool—Wheat futures advanced one and one-half pence following reports of insufficient rains in Australia, and improved milling demand. Cotton futures closed 5 to 6 points higher today despite the increase in the estimated production shown by the U. S. crop report. Traders quietly awaited this report early in the day when prices got up slightly on trade and Bombay buying.

Advertising Gains 9.5% Over Last Year

Boston, Mass., Oct. 8.—One of the most hopeful recovery signs is the relatively high level of newspaper advertising. Total lineage in August topped a year ago by 10 per cent, while the increase in the first eight months of this year was 9½ per cent over the same 1935 months. The largest August gain was made by financial advertising which exceeded a year ago by 28½ per cent.

Wheat Advances With Strike Peace

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—Stimulated largely by settlement of the strike that recently has tied up Minneapolis' grain and flour industry, Chicago wheat prices today rose almost 2 cents. Possibilities of Russian intervention in the Spanish War did much also to strengthen wheat values. Outstanding, too, as a bullish factor were estimates that as much as 1,500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been bought today for export.

Chicago wheat futures closed nervous at some reaction, ½ to 1⅛ cents above yesterday's finish. December, 114⅛@114¼; May, 112⅛@112⅝; July, 97¾; corn, ⅝ to ⅞ up; December, 94⅞@95; May, 90⅝; July, 86⅜; oats, ⅛ to ⅜ advanced; December, 41⅝, and rye showing ½ to ⅝ gain; December, 81⅞. Provisions results were bulges of 10 to 22 cents.

9-Month Steel Output Exceeds All Last Year

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Production of steel ingots in the first nine months of 1936 totaled more than the entire ingot production for 1935, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today. Output was 40 per cent above that for the first three quarters of last year.

Total for the period was 33,605,304 gross tons of open hearth and Bessemer ingots, compared with 24,051,412 gross tons in the first nine months of 1935 and 33,417,985 tons for the whole of last year.

Clearings Rise 26.2 Per Cent In Oct. 7 Week

Local Volume Increases 42.5 Per Cent Over Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—A further gain appeared in the record of bank clearings for the latest period.

The amount for 22 leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, for the week ended Wednesday, October 7, was $6,343,603,000, against $5,025,028,000 a year ago, a rise of 26.2 per cent.

This contrasted with a decline of 13.3 per cent a week earlier. The increase during the past week was due, in part, to the heavy settlements incident to the first of the month. These were included a week earlier in 1935.

At New York City clearings totaled $4,072,477,000, an increase of 25.7 per cent over the $3,238,625,000 recorded in the same week last year. The aggregate at outside centers was $2,271,216,000, a percentage increase of 27.1 over the amount in the similar 1935 week.

Total bank clearings rose $795,908,000 over the amount for the previous week. Between the same comparative weeks in 1935 there was a decrease of $1,371,624,000.

Figures at leading cities, together with percentage gains and decreases, follow:

Cubs Trade Lon Warneke to Cards for Parmelee and Collins

Louis Is Held Silly to Fight Brescia

Negro Will Get $15,000 at Most and Risks K.O. by Argentine.

Although 5-1 Favorite, Joe Faces Foe With a Smashing Right.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Brown Bomber Joe Louis is taking a silly and dangerous gamble with his ring reputation and fistic future tomorrow night when he meets young Jorge Brescia, the hard-hitting Argentine gaucho, in a ten-round bout at the Hippodrome.

For a purse that will approximate only $15,000, Detroit's sensational Negro boxer—who unfortunately stuns too easily when smashed on the chin—will risk opportunities of making hundreds of thousands of dollars in more important bouts and possibilities of becoming world heavyweight champion.

Shuffling Joe is a 5-1 favorite to win over Brescia and 2-1 favorite to knock out the brawny lad from Buenos Aires in this bout which will usher in professional boxing at Mike Jacob's plush-lined Hippodrome, swankiest fight club in the world.

Has Power in His Right.

But Louis also was a 5-1 favorite to win over ancient Max Schmeling at Yankee Stadium on June 19—and he wound up on the floor with the referee saying grace over his prostrate form. Tomorrow night he is tackling a 22-year-old husky whose right fist carries plenty of dynamite and travels straighter and faster than that of Herr Schmeling. He is tackling a big, strong youngster who will outweigh Joe about 5 pounds and have advantages of height, reach, biceps and forearm. And Brescia is entering the ring unbeaten.

Most boxing writers believe that Louis will dispose of the erstwhile Pampas cowboy in short order because of Brescia's lack of boxing polish and because of reports that Brescia also has a glass jaw. Brescia has fought eight American professional fights in which he registered five knockouts and three decisions. His South American "amateur" record shows 29 kayoes and 6 decisions in 35 bouts. Brescia's most impressive United States victory was a 6-round decision over Big Frankie Connelley, of Boston, in January. His blows put Connelley on the sidelines for six months.

Coincidentally, the Gaucho's last fight was on the night of June 19, when Schmeling's right fist flattened the Bomber. The sight of Louis on the floor that night gave Senor Brescia a lot of confidence. That was the night Jorge pounded out an upset decision over rugged Abe Feldman, of New York. Since then the Argentine scrapper has been preparing for this tilt with Louis. He received special instruction from Philadelphia Jack O'Brien, a master of ring craft. He expects to weigh in at 207 tomorrow—his lightest poundage for any American fight. Louis will scale about 202.

1936 Seen Boom Year For College Gridders

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 8.—Picking up where major league baseball left off, with a flock of new records for attendance, the college football season appears likely to draw the biggest crowds in its history.

The trend has been upward in most parts of the country for the last season or two as a consequence of readjustments made to counteract the effects of the depression years. Already there are signs of the 1936 "boom" in pigskin popularity.

Ohio State will play to its second straight capacity or near-capacity crowd this Saturday at Columbus with the Pittsburgh Panthers as the visiting participants in a game that bears upon the national championship situation. Last week around 72,000 saw the Bucks overwhelm New York University. This week, 75,000 likely will jam the big stadium.

Grant P. Ward, writing in the Ohio State Journal, forecasts the Bucks will draw more than 500,000 spectators this season. He adds: "The answer is that the Bucks have color and are facing a difficult schedule in which every game is a headliner. That combination is bound to pack them in, especially in case of a winner."

That's the tipoff on the new "big-league" policy in college football. More major teams are playing more opponents in their own class, from start to finish, than ever before. It applies to every section of the country.

Notre Dame, always one of the great gridiron drawing cards, is assured a flock of sellouts. The return game at South Bend with Ohio State needs no build-up after last season's thriller at Columbus. The twin engagements with Navy and Army at Baltimore and New York, respectively, on November 7 and 14, are certain to pack 'em in.

Dean Is on Block, 'For Right Terms' Breadon Decides

By the Associated Press.

St. Loius, Oct. 8.—Dizzy Dean is on the trading block, President Sam Breadon, of the Cardinals, declared tonight, and so is any other member of the "Gas-House Gang"—if the terms are right.

"I'd trade Dizzy, but the deal would have to be such that it would bolster the Cardinals," Breadon said. "The same goes for any other player we have."

Breadon's attitude is an about-face for, in the past, he has invariably declared he would not trade his eccentric pitching ace.

Rain Interrupts Trial Runs for Auto Race

Westbury, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Rain interrupted qualifying trials for the 300-mile George Vanderbilt Cup on the new Roosevelt raceway today and the drivers and mechanics of more than 60 cars entered in the Columbus Day race put in their time tuning up their "iron horses."

Qualification tests will be resumed tomorrow morning. So far only 15 cars have qualified.

Move Is First To Get Color In Team

English, Hartnett Also Are Reported to Be on Trading Block.

Wrigley and Grimm Are Also After Lieber, Giant Outfielder.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Owner Phil K. Wrigley wasn't fooling when he told Manager Charlie Grimm to trade any or all of his Chicago Cubs in seeking "punch and color" for 1937.

He proved it today by approving the trading of one of his reatest stars, Lonnie Warneke, stout-hearted top hand of the Cub hurling corps since 1932, to the St. Louis Cardinals for Jim (Ripper) Collins, slugging first baseman, and Le Roy (Tarzan) Parmelee, strapping right-handed pitcher.

The deal, first big blast of the major league bartering season, was just a starter in Wrigley's plans for a sweeping shakeup, it was indicated at the Cub offices. Charles (Bots) Weber, secretary-business manager of the club, said other deals were brewing, but mentioned only one—negotiations with the New York Giants for Outfielder Hank Leiber.

Hartnett, English on Block.

Reports also were current that Capt. Woody English, Grimm's infield "insurance," and the veteran Gabby Hartnett, a great favorite of Cub fans, will be used for trading bait.

Only dire need of a first baseman to replace young Phil Cavarretta could have induced him to part with Warneke, Grimm told Wrigley in making the deal. He said he offered the Cardinals, whose lack of pitching strength caused them to fade during the stretch drive in the National League race, every other hurler on the staff. The Cardinals, however, insisted on Warneke, and Grimm, determined to get Collins, yielded.

Grimm said he "hated like hell to part with Warneke," and lauded the lean Arkansan as a "great pitcher and a loyal, faithful player." He

Sutherland Drives Pitt Squad in Practice

Pittsburgh, Oct. 8 (AP).—Dr. John Bain Sutherland, silent and scowling, sent his University of Pittsburgh Panthers through a final workout on a wet practice field this afternoon and supervised a blackboard drill tonight in preparation for Saturday's major skirmish with Ohio State at Columbus.

The overcast skies seemed to reflect the canny Scot's mood today as he drove three elevens through a short but intensive signal drill.

Washington U Iron Men Face Notre Dame Team

St. Louis, Mo.—Washington University "iron men," eleven players who went through the entire Illinois game last Saturday without a single substitution, will be given the same assignment this Saturday against Notre Dame at South Bend, Coach Jim Conzelman. Use of the "iron men" is not so much a matter of choice as necessity because of inadequate reserves.

G. W. to Gamble For Triumph Over Ole Miss

Ready to gamble for their first major victory of the 1936 football season, George Washington's Colonials will confront the University of Mississippi with their full stock of tricks tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Coach Jim Pixlee, in the Colonials' final practice yesterday, commanded his squad to play an offensive game to the hilt in an effort to outscore Ole Miss. Caution will not be thrown to the wind, exactly, but beyond using reasonable care, G. W. is prepared to unveil all of its new plays.

Pixlee's quarterbacks have been ordered to discard their habit of kicking on the early downs and hold the ball until the third or last down in an attempt to use every ground-gaining opportunity.

Twenty thousand fans are expected to see the battle tonight, according to advance sale indications.

Piccolo Beats Bootless After See-Saw Duel in Laurel Feature

$98 Mutuel Returned by Idle Way

Edile Pays $65 as Long Shots Have Big Day; Double Is $332.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 8.—The light blue and brown of C. V. Whitney and the white and green of E. R. Bradley tangled in a thrilling feature race this afternoon with the former triumphant, Piccolo, son of Whichone, was the winner over Bootless, a son of Black Toney, in a battle that had a crowd of 8,000 standing on seats. A nose separated the pair at the end of the mile and a sixteenth contest after first one and then the other had held the lead. Both were heavily bet, with Piccolo holding, as he did on the running, a slight edge. The Whitney colt paid a $5.20 mutuel.

Two Bob, a The Porter filly, was third, a length behind the battling pair at the wire.

What began as a five-horse race soon developed into a two-horse affair, Piccolo on the rail and Bootless on the outside, moved away from Booming Guns, one that showed early speed, to wage a struggle that was to end at the wire.

Both Westrope, on Piccolo and Renick, on Bootless, held their mounts under restraint to the far turn. Westrope was first to go to a drive and Piccolo added to his slight margin at this stage. Renick then went to the whip and Bootless gradually moved up to take command in midstretch. But Westrope and Piccolo were not through. The colt found some reverse punch and came again to nip Bootless, despite the almost frantic riding on the part of Renick.

Rockwood Wins.

Piccolo, winning his fourth race in nine starts this year, was timed in 1:45.

Weston, from the barn of Jouett Shouse, won his second straight purse in the sixth race, defeating Aladdins Dream by a length and a half, with South Bend judged third after a camera finish with Light Brook. Weston gained the lead in the opening quarter and ran out at the stretch turn, but had enough speed to withstand the closing rush of Aladdins Dream. The winner, clocked in 1:45 1-5, paid a $5.30 mutuel.

The Maemere Farm's Rockwood proved a worthy favorite in the first race of today's program at the plant of the Maryland State Fair, Inc. The Ariel colt, with Jockey Eddie Litzenberger in the saddle, bounded to the front in the stretch to win by a length over A. G. Vanderbilt's Boulevard with the Brandon Stable's Tonianna third and a half length away.

With the exception of Timber Lady, one that quit after reaching the lead, the contention was between the three ultimate money horses. Rockwood was kept out of the pace-setting battle, but always was close enough to be a menace.

Rockwood paid a $4.70 mutuel and raced the 6 furlongs in 1:13 1-5. The usual week-day crowd of 8,000 was in attendance.

Idle Way Pays $98.80.

The largest mutuel pay-off of the meeting, $98.80, resulted from the running of the third race. Idle Way, a Waygood-Wildwood filly, came through with a half-length triumph over the Bomar Stable's Beth Bon to give the longshot players their chance to cheer. Jockey L. Canfield, riding his first winner of the meeting, sent Idle Way around the leaders to take command and then put the filly to pressure in the stretch to draw out on Beth Bon. Bartering Kate was third after being squeezed back at the far turn. Idle Way ran the 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5 and completed a $332.80 daily double.

The parade of longshots was carried over into the fourth race with a mutuel of $65.60 being displayed on Edile after the gelded son of Wrack had defeated the favored Seven Star by three lengths. Third money in the group of 13 was annexed by a tiring Miss Jones. Edile was well ridden by Jockey E. Tucker and carried the colors of F A. Carreaud. The young gelding ran Miss Jones into defeat and had daylight to spare on Seven Star. The winner's time was 1:44 1-5 for the mile and 70 yards.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCKWOOD, $4.70, $3.70, $2.90; BOULEVARD, $6.90, $4.30; TONIANNA, $5.90.

ROCKWOOD, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, came to the outside for racing room entering the stretch and, under strong handling, drew out in the final sixteenth. BOULEVARD raced on the inside under steadying restraint to the stretch, disposed of TONIANNA, but could not resist the winner. TONIANNA rushed to the front at once, was rated when TIMBER LADY took command, came with good energy when placed to drive to regain lead, but faltered. COMPLIMENT made up some ground. CARE FOR moved up menacingly in the early stretch, but hung. ROLLICKER was going well at the end. TIMBER LADY stopped after going to the front.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:06½. Off at 2:06½. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIPLE ACTION, $6.70, $3.60, $2.70; THE SCHEMER (entry), $3.10, $2.40; GAY BALKO, $2.70.

TRIPLE ACTION, a forward factor from the start while rated, moved up with good energy when placed to a drive and drew clear in the closing sixteenth. THE SCHEMER, hard ridden throughout, came to the outside for the final test and was going fastest at the end. GAY BALKO was rushed to the top at once, but tired suddenly in mid-stretch. MISS ADELINE was forced to race along the rail in tight quarters most of the trip and after PRAIRIE PRINCE, off slowly, came with good speed at the end. JOURNEY ON could not keep up.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:45. Winner, P. W. Staton's b. f. (3), by Waygood—Wildwood. Trained by D. Stonewood. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:11 4-5.

†Mrs. E. Denemark entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IDLE WAY, $98.80, $39.60, $15.70; BETH BON, $8.90, $5.60; BARTERING KATE, $2.80.

IDLE WAY, hard ridden throughout, went up on the outside of BETH BON and BARTERING KATE to take a slight lead and was kept to pressure through the stretch to close gamely. BETH BON had good speed from the start, was rated along while setting and pressing the pace, took a brief lead inside the eighth pole, but tired slightly in the final stages. BARTERING KATE, off forwardly, was taken up while running between IDLE WAY and BETH BON at the far turn and failed to rally. TOP DOG came through on the inside leaving the far turn and closed full of run. CALUMET DICK came between horses with a rush midway of the stretch. MY SURPRISE could not keep up. GRAND DUKE dropped back after three furlongs. GREEK FIRE and DARK WINTER were outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $332.80.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates for all but Highland Lane. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:13½. Off at 3:16½. Winner, F. A. Carreaud's b. g. (3), by Wrack—Edify. Trained by C. A. Roles. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 1-5.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EDILE, $65.60, $18.60, $10.90; SEVEN STAR, $3.90, $2.90; MISS JONES (field), $4.00.

EDILE, in the thick of contention from the start, challenged MISS JONES repeatedly before taking command swinging for the stretch, was put to pressure and easily drew clear in the last stages. SEVEN STAR, outrun for five furlongs, went to the outside for racing room and closed gamely, but could not menace the winner. MISS JONES gained command in the dash for the first turn, was hard ridden and tired in the closing quarter. OUT OF FIRE worked his way to contention entering the stretch, but hung thereafter. POVEL had speed in spots. STIPULATE closed a gap. MORUN quit in the stretch.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. The Catoctin. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates for all but Knight Warrior. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46½. Off at 3:49. Winner, C. V. Whitney's br. c. (3), by Whichone—Piccoline. Trained by J. A. Healey. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:38 2-5, 1:45

| BOOMING GUNS | (Lynch) | 110 | 3 | 3 | 3½ | 3½½ | 5 | 5 | 5 | 6.60 |

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PICCOLO, $5.20, $2.60, $2.10; BOOTLESS, $2.50, $2.10; TWO BOB, $2.30.

PICCOLO, saving ground and under restraint while running with BOOTLESS to the far turn, was headed by BOOTLESS midway of the stretch, but rallied under severe handling to be up in the final strides as Westrope appeared to outride RENICK. BOOTLESS went wide at the first turn, was under restraint to three-eighth pole, and fought it out willingly after being shaken up. TWO BOB closed some ground during the final half. KNIGHT WARRIOR was unprepared for the break and came gamely in the final test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:16½. Off at 4:17. Winner, A. Shouse's b. g. (4), by Nocturnal or Sun Flag—Madcap Princess. Trained by W. J. Hirsch. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WESTON, $5.30, $3.40, $2.50; ALADDIN'S DREAM, $4.90, $3.40; SOUTH BEND, $3.10.

WESTON went through on the inside at the first turn to take the lead, was rated along, ran slightly wide entering the final straightaway and was kept to a drive. ALADDIN'S DREAM, outrun to the stretch, came between horses with a rush and was going fastest at the end. SOUTH BEND, in tight quarters going to the backstretch, was caught in behind WESTON and SCUDDER leaving the backstretch and failed to rally in the stretch. LIGHT BROOK responded well. GOOD FLAVOR could not threaten.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:47. Off at 4:49. Winner, Shandon Farm's ch. g. (5), by Ladkin—Golden Lassie II. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASHEN, $9.30, $6.00, $4.30; LADY CARROT, $16.50, $7.10; FOGARTY, $2.80.

ASHEN gained command swinging for the backstretch, opened a gap, was steadied into the stretch and had to be vigorously ridden to withstand closing bid of LADY CARROT. The latter was rated off the pace to the stretch and closed willingly under good handling. FOGARTY, allowed to settle into best stride, circled horses for racing room and came with a rush midway of the stretch, but lung in the last 20 yards. SILVERY CLOUD entered contention in the stretch, but faltered. LITTLE ARGO ran close up for six furlongs, but had nothing left for the final test. JUSTA FLIGHT was hard ridden throughout.

Confident Hoyas Leave for First Test of Season at Cincinnati

Hagerty Sees Touchdown Triumph

33 Players Make Trip; Robertson Wins Spot at One of Tackles.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Cheerfully confident of bringing back a bearsteak, to be carved from the hide of Cincinnati's Bearcats, a squad of 33 burly Georgetown gridmen entrained at 10:55 last night for the Ohio city and what looms as their first big test of the season.

Loyal students and alumni bade the team farewell with a blazing torchlight parade that wound through the principal thoroughfares of old Georgetown and ended in the yard where a mass demonstration culminated the rally. Coach Jack Hagerty addressed the crowd and predicted a Hoya victory "by at least two touchdowns."

But, while Hagerty was openly as confident as the men under his command he was more than a little worried that Cincinnati will be a stumbling block. He scouted the foe against West Virginia last week, and although the Ohioans went down to a crushing defeat he came away convinced that they pack a powerful punch and will be dangerous tomorrow night.

Robertson Gets Job.

The same starting line-up that opened the season against Delaware last week will prevail against Cincinnati with but one exception. Tom Robertson getting the call at tackle. Whether he will replace Al Vacarro or Clem Stralka has not been determined, but Robertson is certain to start.

Al Snyder and Jack Fleming, who will do the kicking, will start at ends; Johnny Frank and Lou Shuker, guards; Red Hardy, center, for the starting line. In the backfield Tom Keating will call signals and Bill Valiquette and Bob Ferrara at halfback and Bill Duff at full. This combination displayed both speed and power in romping over Delaware and a similar performance tomorrow will net them a second victory.

To Use Open Play.

Win, lose or draw, Georgetown will rely on a wide-open brand of football, which was chiefly responsible for their successes last year, and which promises to be doubly potent with Jack Fleming's long-distance punting always available to pull them out of any holes they may get into. With Tommy Keating at the helm even Hagerty doesn't know what to expect next, thus it is only reasonable to presume that the boy will keep Cincinnati guessing a bit.

The team is scheduled to arrive in Cincinnati this afternoon at 3:45 o'clock, and will work out at the stadium at 8:30 p. m. After the game the squad will entrain at 12:45 a. m. Sunday, arriving at White Sulphur Springs at 8:30 for mass and breakfast. It will arrive in Washington at 3:45 p. m.

11 Scholastic Grid Contests Set Today

With no less than 11 high and prep schools of the Capital area engaged in football today, the schoolboy season is setting an early peak of activity unlikely to be matched all the rest of the year. Of the 11 schools ten are playing in this area, St. Alban's game with Boys Latin at Baltimore being the only distant conflict.

Central and Fork Union may be putting on the main event, but not in the estimation of Eastern, Tech, Roosevelt, Western, et cetera. Tech's game with Gonzaga on the new field in Tech Stadium should pack about as many thrills.

Renewal of the rivalry between Eastern and St. John's at Eastern falls in the same class, although Eastern is a heavier choice to win than is Tech. Over in Roosevelt Stadium Roosevelt plays its first game against outside opposition, with the ever scrappy Bullis eleven as the opposition.

Western visits Ballston, Va., for its annual game with Washington-Lee High, beaten by Central, 6 to 0, last week. Western upset the Little Generals, 7 to 6, in '35, but rates somewhat under this ranking at present. Friends School plays Tome Institute at Friendship Field at 3:30 p. m.

Finally in condition after given use of the Tech field, the Tech eleven, deprived of a place to practice for nearly two weeks, is now set to go against the game little Jesuit school. It will mark the first game between Tech and Gonzaga in four years and one of the few ever played in Tech Stadium, newly provided with a grass surface.

Western's chances against Washington-Lee brightened considerably with return to action of Morris Snead, ace backfield man, who beat St. John's last week in five plays. Coach Dan Ahern is considering starting Blackie Brewer, Izzy Weinstein and Art Farquharson in the backfield with Snead.

The Friends game with Tome at Friendship Field will find Charlie Wannan directing the team as quarterback and Fergus, A. Newmyer, and Josh Miller, of Nokesville, the probable other members of the backfield.

St. Alban's will probably start with Benton Huntress at quarter, Munston and Marston at the halves and Cary T. Grayson, jr., at fullback.

Hecht Co. Bowlers Take Lead in Store League

The Hecht Co. moved into undisputed possession of first place in the Department Store Bowling League by sweeping their set from Wm. Hahn & Co. Jack Wolstenholme, of Hecht Co., rolled a new reason record with a 394 set.

Outstanding sets rolled last night besides Wolstenholme were C. Aylor, 386; Vic Riston, 374; Terry, 359; Kiska, 356; McDonald, 352; Irwin Simon, 348; Didszoneit, 343; Tolford, 341, and Bowman, 340.

GUARDSMEN SEEK GAME.

Torrance, Olympic Track Man, Here Seeking Ring Debut Foe

Negotiations Started to Book Shot-Put Titlist for Bout in City.

Jack Torrance, the 289-pound former Louisiana State University and Olympic athlete, was in Washington yesterday seeking to make his profesional debut in the Capital.

Herb Brodie, a former Navy man, who once was one of the best right-hand punchers in the pro lightweight boxing ranks, had Torrance in tow and he dragged him before his old friend, Maj. Harvey L. Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, for inspection.

Maj. Miller, himself a one-time boxing great, sized up the big boy, had him weighed on the official scales—and pronounced him fit and ready to make his debut here. Negotiations were immediately started to book Torrance at Turner's Arena.

Brodie discovered Torrance's boxing ability while the L. S. U. star was en route to the Berlin Olympics on the S. S. Manhattan, on which Brodie is an officer. Not only is Torrance a track and field star, but he starred for his school at baseball, basketball and football—and holds the world's shot-put title.

Torrance left last night for his home in Baton Rouge, La., where he will condition himself for his profesional punch-pushing career, which he hopes to start here.

Only 2 Titlists Keep Laurels In Golf Play

Five New Champions Are Crowned in 7 Club Championships.

By Dave Herman.

Only two champions retained their laurels, and five new titleholders were crowned as women's golf championships were concluded at seven District clubs yesterday.

Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, made successful defenses of their titles.

The new champions: Mrs. Henry M. Brundage, who upset the dope by dethroning Mrs. J. W. Beller, 5 and 3, in the finals at Columbia.

Miss Marion Brown, 18-year-old star, who conquered Mrs. C. P. Medley, 5 and 4, at Manor.

Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, victor over the defending champion, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, 2 and 1, at Congressional.

Mrs. Gilbert Hahn, who won the Woodmont title by defeating 19-year-old Janice Loeb, 5 and 3.

Mrs. S. K. Robinson, who surprised by defeating the medalist and favorite, Mrs. Charlotte S. Stern, 2-up at Army and Navy.

Has 6-Stroke Lead.

Finishing with rounds of 88—88—87 for a 263 total, Miss Houghton won the 54-hole championship at Chevy Chase by a 6-stroke margin. Mrs. Bishop Hill, winding up with a great 64, was second. One stroke behind her was Mrs. Landra B. Platt with 296, and in fourth came Miss Louise Claytor with 276. Mrs. Platt closed in 91, being seven strokes above Mrs. Hill's 18-hole round.

Miss Brown and Mrs. Walper finished like real champions.

The young Manor miss needed par in for a 75 when she ended her match with Mrs. Medley on the fourteenth green. She was out in 38, 3 over par, and played the next five holes in only 2 over. During her round she picked up four birdies.

Mrs. Walper, out in 42 against Mrs. McEntee, shot 3-4-5-4-4, even par, for the next five holes The Kenwood champion needed par in for a 77.

Mrs. Brundage's triumph at Columbia was her first important one since she took up golf a few years ago. After defeating two favorites, Mrs. Brundage played rock-steady golf to conquer Mrs. Beller, the favorite. Hitting her woods and irons for tremendous distances, Mrs. Brundage took an early lead on Mrs. Beller, turned in 44, and played careful golf the remainder of the journey.

Mrs. Rhyne, medalist, had a nip-and-tuck battle with Mrs. Mackenzie. Her superiority around the greens was a telling factor in her victory.

At Army and Navy Mrs. Stern, the medalist, found herself three-down at the tenth to Mrs. Robinson, a newcomer to the District, and was unable to erase this lead on the back nine.

3 Seeded Players Lose in Net Play

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Oct. 8 (AP).—Two seeded women contenders and one of the selected men players fell today in upset matches in the Greenbrier Golf and Tennis Club's annual autumn tennis tournament.

Huntington H. Hartford, youthful New Yorker, eliminated the towering David N. Jones, of New York, third in the men's seeded list, 7—5, 6—1, to enter the semifinal round of the singles.

Sarah Hinde, of New Jersey, scored an unexpected triumph in beating Mrs. W. J. Dyson, English matron, who was seeded No. 2, 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, and Barbara Nields, of Cleveland, registered a similar victory by downing Mrs. Carl Gray, of Hartford, Conn., 6—1, 3—6, 7—5.

J. Gilbert Hall, of Orange, N. J., seeded No. 1, moved into the quarter final round by beating Paul Massey, of Pennsylvania State, 6—2, 2—6, 6—4.

Fowler Victor In 22-Hole Match

A 22-hole victory by Ralph Fowler over F. S. Pomeroy featured yesterday's first-round matches in Washington Golf and Country Club's championship yesterday.

A birdie 4 on the fourth extra hole won for Fowler. Dr. C. E. Buck, 1934 champion, and Reese Hair, a former titleholder, were eliminated.

Second-round matches will be played this afternoon, starting at 12:45.

Results:

First Flight.

Dorey Gruver defeated Frank Williams, 1 up; Ralph Fowler defeated F. S. Pomeroy, 1 up, 22 holes; Charlie Vatle defeated Reese Hair, 3 and 2; L. H. Whitten defeated James T. ## Navy Finishes Practice for Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8.—The regiment's interest in the Viginia game here Saturday was demonstrated this afternoon when the Midshipmen, headed by the Naval Academy band, marched to the stands during practice and cheered and sang for the team. The Middies marched to the stands by battalions, the third battalion headed by their own improvised band.

The practice this afternoon, the last of any length, was a sort of review of the week's work, Tom Hamilton drilling his charges in detail on their work in the different offensive and defensive formations. Tomorrow, preparation for the game will end with a short signal and formation drill.

Hamilton is not sure about his starting lineup, and may start a second string against Virginia, as he did last week against Davidson. However, when he masses his forces for the heavy work, the only change in the first string team will be that Bill Ingram will be at the No. 4 backfield position.

Frank Case, Sneed Schmidt and Bob Antrim have strangle holds on their places in the first-choice backfield, but the three-cornered fight for the other place is very much on.

Leon Ames Dies.

Warren, Ohio, Oct. 8 (AP).—Leon J. Ames, 54, former pitcher for the New York Giants and other National League clubs, died here today after a long illness.

Ames won 28 games and lost 10 for the Giants in 1911.

Lewis May Face Suspension By N.B.A.

Light-Heavy Champ Must Fight Bout Here or Be Barred by Body.

John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion, faces suspension in the District of Columbia—and all States affiliated with the National Boxing Association—unless he agrees to fight his first bout in the United States after his return from abroad for the local promoters who had him booked to meet Roy Williams at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night.

Because Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn are running a boxing show at Turner's Arena next Monday night, the Al Gainor-Roy Williams fight, which had been booked as a substitute for the contest involving the 175-pound titleholder, has been canceled.

Through his manager, William Greenlee, of Pittsburgh, Lewis agreed to meet Williams here next Tuesday night, even though a contract he previously had signed to meet Len Harvey in London November 2 called for his appearance on British soil at least three weeks prior to the bout.

Wednesday Greenlee wired Promoter Earl McDonald, who had booked the champion, that he believed the English bout would be postponed, thereby making it possible for Lewis to show here as agreed, but that he had just learned the British contest would be held as scheduled. Greenlee asked for a release from his Washington contract, promising that Lewis would make his first fight upon his return from abroad in Washington.

McDonald carried the Lewis case to the Boxing Commission yesterday. That body immediately notified Greenlee that a suspension, which would hold good in all the States working with the National Boxing Association and many countries in Europe, might be invoked on Lewis.

"Mr. McDonald advises this commission that if you will send him immediately an agreement to the effect that John Henry Lewis will carry out his original contract to box in Washington against the best available opponent on Wednesday, November 25, 1936, before he boxes again in the United States, he will withdraw his violation of contract charges," the commission wrote Greenlee.

Kampfer Beats Managoff in Tussle

Hans Kampfer, the German strong man, squeezed out a victory over Ivan (the Terrible) Managoff, the ruthless Russian, after 17 minutes of a scheduled two-hour feature wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night.

The bout, witnessed by more than 2,000 addicts of burp, was dedicated almost entirely to straight grappling while it lasted. Kampfer finally clamped his famed bear hug about Managoff's midsection, and squeezed and squeezed until Ivan was too weary to resist having his shoulders nailed to the mat.

In a semifinal, scheduled for 30 minutes, Cliff Olson pinned Jim Wright in 12 minutes. Olson employed a series of arm stretches and back drops to subdue James.

In preliminaries scheduled to endure 30 minutes, Jack Donovan wrestled to a draw against Henry Piers, Cy Williams and John Katan labored to a stalemate and Matros Kirilenko flopped Harry Finkelstein in 14½ minutes.

SOUTHEAST PRACTICES.

The Southeast Athletic Club will practice at 7:30 p. m. tonight in the Brent schoolyard in preparation for Sunday's game with the Silver Spring Merchants, on the latter's field. Eddie Hoff should attend the practice or notify Russ Hilderbrand, District 3672 or Lincoln 5896-W.

Tarheels Set for Terps After Long Drills on Aerial Defense

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 8.—The Tarheels today concluded hard work for the important game with Maryland in Kenan Stadium here Saturday.

Except for Tony Cernugle, sophomore halfback, who was injured last Saturday, the squad was in fairly good physical shape for their encounter with the Terps. Kick-off time is set for 2:30 o'clock.

Long and hard drills against the Old Liners' pass trickery was featured in the Carolina training menu this week. The Tarheels fear the glowing reports concerning the Terps' aerial bombs as narrated by Scout Bob Fetzer. They fully realize their assignment Saturday. The deceptive air maneuvers of the Old Liners are being prepared for.

But the passing is only one phase of the Maryland offense. A smooth, well-oiled running game, as reported by Coach Fetzer, has kept the Tarheel mentors on the go.

Maryland is expected to arrive here sometime Saturday morning. It will probably stop somewhere near Chapel Hill Friday night. With Bill Guckeyson, all-Southern triple-threat ace back in the fold, the Terps are getting ready to shoot the works Saturday. He may not play the whole game, but he'll be in there part of the time, and the Tarheels are well acquainted with this chap.

Central, Fork Union Play Today

Prep Champs To Outweigh D.C. Team

Both Elevens Unscored On; Game to Start at 3:30 P. M.

RECORDS.

| CENTRAL. | | FORK UNION. |
|---|---|---|
| 6 Wash.-Lee | 0 | 0 W. & M. Frosh 0 |

Central High's inter-high football champions face a man-sized assignment today when a rough-and-ready Fork Union Military Academy team barges into Central Stadium. It will be Washington's champs against the prep school champs of Virginia when the two teams sail into each other at 3:30 p. m.

Both teams are unscored upon thus far this season, but Fork Union has a tie on its record, a 0-0 deadlock with the William and Mary freshmen last week. The cadets will outweigh Central 7 pounds per man in the line and 17 pounds per man in the backfield.

Weston Wins Purse.

Coach Hardy Pearce concluded intensive preparations for the game yesterday with a light workout. Prior to yesterday the squad worked out daily against Devitt Prep, the only local team to play Fork Union in years. Devitt was beaten 26 to 6 last year in the "Little Tobacco Bowl" game of the American Legion of Richmond.

Well known for its emphasis on football, Fork Union will be throwing into action a squad containing 26 post-graduates out of 30 members. Picked from all over the East the cadets have been molded into an outfit packing the punch of a miniature Minnesota. The Virginians stopped Naval Training School at Norfolk, 13 to 0, in their opening game.

Line Averages 182.

Central, however, has been pointing for the game seriously, intent on keeping its unbeaten record intact. Billy Vermillion, pilot of the Mount Pleasanters to the inter-high title last year, will be at quarterback with Bill Wooten, triple-threat fullback, Bill Ickes and Bernie Askin in the backfield.

Quarterbacking for the Fork Union will be George Moyer, of Phillipsburg, N. J., with Frank Pogozelski, from the mining district of Pennsylvania, at one halfback post. Pogozelski is one of the three regulars from last season back in uniform. It was Pogozelski who more or less ran riot against Devitt last year.

Guy DeMuro, of Passaic, N. J., and Kosimer Hilpolit, 200-pound fullback of Bound Brook, N. J., round out the backfield. The only other veterans in uniform besides Pogozelski will be the Rigler twins, Ray and Ralph, who hold down the guard positions and dumped many a Devitt man out of the path of Fork Union ball carriers in the Richmond game.

Ambers May Fight Furr-Lucas Victor

Lou Ambers, lightweight champion of the world, yesterday agreed to meet the winner of next Monday night's welterweight boxing bout between Phil Furr and Johnny Lucas—"if the terms are satisfactory." Furr and Lucas will fight at Turner's Arena.

It is understood that Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who has been dickering for the 135-pound ruler here, would be able to meet the terms as outlined by Ambers and that the bout might become a reality here sometime in the near future.

G. W. to Gamble For Win Over Ole Miss

The game is the first major struggle to be booked on a Washington gridiron this season

The watchword of G. W.'s defense will be "Stop Hapes!" The Hapes fellow is the 172-pound halfback who raised hob with the Catholic University team in the January 1 game in the Miami Orange Bowl, all but leading Ole Miss to victory in the last half with his long runs.

Three times during his career with Ole Miss, Ray Hapes has broken away for 90-yard runs and a defense against the shifty-footed lad has occupied G. W. coaches for the past week. The Colonials, however, have not neglected the possibilities of Hapes' backfield colleagues, notably his big brother, Clarence Hapes.

Beaten by Temple and Tulane, the Rebels come to town with their competitive spirit at white heat, thirsting for their first victory of the season. Temple won on a fifty-ninth minute forward passing attack, and Tulane kicked the extra point, while Mississippi missed its try in winning a 7-to-6 victory. Thus, it is no weak and impotent team that George Washington is called upon to face.

Colonials Underdogs.

But it will be no weak and coddling team that Mississippi engages, for the current Colonial edition represents the strongest 11-man combination Pixlee has placed on the field since assuming control five years ago. No All-Americans grace the line-up, nobody stands out like "Tuffy" Leemans, who dominated the scene like a Barrymore in an amateur theatrical group, but there is a spirit, a drive and a will-to-win that is utterly new to George Washington football.

The team actually has more power than when it had Leemans running the ball 99 per cent of the time, and doing the passing, kicking and most of the tackling. In Joey Kaufman and Vic Sampson, a couple of slim and slippery halfbacks, Pixlee has two boys who can roam through broken fields with the best of them. Herb Reeves gives him a line-smashing fullback who can get that all-important yard needed for first down, or bore through the middle for substantial gains.

Scanlon, Sandlot Star, Will Marry

Mike Scanlon, well-known sandlot football player and former St. John's Prep star, will join the ranks of the benedicts tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, when he will be married to Miss Catherine Connor at a nuptial mass to be celebrated at St. Aloysious Church.

Scanlon, who is coaching the Northwestern Club this season, was for several years player-coach for the strong Palace Club, one of the city's oldest and best-known sandlot organizations. Before that he shone for three years at St. John's, where he was a letterman in three sports, making the All-Prep basketball and football teams.

The couple will reside at 49 M street northwest, after motoring through New York and New England on their wedding trip.

3 Changes Made In C.U. Line-up For La Salle

A trio of new faces will appear in Catholic University's starting line-up tomorrow when the Cardinals resume their young but not tender feud with La Salle at Brookland, but they will be faces belonging to experienced men, not green and untried rokies.

Bob Makofske, triple-threat left-footed kicking fullback, is slated to replace Red Orth, who was injured in practice; "Chup" Rogers will take over Zeke Brown's place at right end, and Sam Pagama has been delegated to left tackle, a position originally the private property of "One Man Gang" Katalinas.

Coach 'Dutch" Bergman decided on the changes after yesterday's practice, which was held outdoors in a driving rainstorm. He figures Le Salle has something more than 11 uniforms and will be gunning for an upset, while his own men let down a trifle after swamping Shenandosah in the season's inaugural last week.

The Knights of Columbus, who are sponsoring tomorrow's game, report a heavy sale of tickets among members and promise a turnout of several thousand. A good demand for ducats also has been reported from scattered precincts presaging one of the largest turnouts for an early-season game in the school's history.

"Irish" Carroll will assume a new role against La Salle when he boots the kick-offs. Catholic needs a good kicker-off and "Irish," who does everything but help coach, seems to be the best of the numerous candidates.

Ed Dunne, end who has been in Georgetown Hospital a week with an infected arm, rejoined the team yesterday, but will not be available until the De Paul game next week.

Local Soccer Referees Hold Meeting Tonight

Under the chairmanship of John P. Gunn, member of council of the Southeastern Soccer Association, local soccer referees will meet tonight in room 313, District Building, at 8 o'clock, to discuss plans for the ensuing season.

All intending referees are requested to be present tonight as that assignments for the opening league games may be made.

Grimm Trades Warneke for Two Cards

said, however, that he believed Parmelee should win "18 or 20 games for the Cubs."

Both clubs were pleased with the deal. The Cardinals got a much-needed pitcher to team up with the great Dizzy Dean and Brother Paul Dean—if the latter regains form—to round out a potentially powerful "Big Three."

The Cubs obtained a fine fielding first baseman and a power hitter, the lack of which probably cost them the title they won in 1935.

Warneke, who suffered an arm injury in the fifth game of the 1935 World Series, started slowly last season, but reached his real form during the last six weeks and finished with a record of 16 victories and 13 defeats. Parmelee, obtained by the Cardinals from the Giants in exchange for Second Baseman Burgess Whitehead a year ago, started well, but sagged and wound up with 11 victories and 11 defeats.

Collins hit .313 in 1935, but fell into a batting slump midway of last season and yielded his place to Rookie Johnny Mize. He batted .289 in 103 games, hitting 13 homers and driving in 48 runs.

Regardless of how the angling for Leiber turns out, Grimm plans to make an outfielder out of Cavaretta, whom he believes will become a slugger.

209 to Compete In Bike Races Sunday

Outdrawing all other bicycling races in point of entries, the success of the second National Capital Sweepstakes to be run Sunday at 2 p. m. in Potomac Park seems assured.

No less than 209 men have sent in their names to Winfree Johnson in addition to 16 girls. This figure, according to Milton Sencindiver, Washington representative of the Amateur Bicycle League of America, has never been duplicated to the best of his knowledge and Milton got around quite a bit, both as a rider and later an official.

A Washington girl, Betty Hutter, of 1317 Eleventh street northwest, who is but 12 years old, is the youngest entrant in this meet sponsored by the National Capital Parks and the Welfare and Recreational Association and sanctioned by the Amateur Bicycle League of America.

Ted Ostenkamp, of Station WOL, will describe the races over a public speaking system. The Elks Boys Band will also be on hand to furnish music for the occasion. There is no admission charge.

Penn State Soccer Team To Open With Bucknell

State College, Pa.—A green and inexperienced Penn State soccer team will ltake the field against Bucknell here Saturday in the first game of the season for both elevens. Bill McEwan, center forward, and all-Eastern selection two years, will captain the team.

Welcome Awaits Boulder Power

Los Angeles, Oct. 8 (AP).—A festive welcome awaits the arrival here tomorrow night of the first power from Boulder Dam, the Government's colossus on the Colorado River.

Across 266 miles of mountains and desert, through the world's greatest transmission lines, a 1,000-ton generator will hurl electricity of 115,000 horsepower into the largest metropolitan area of the West.

Searchlights producing 7,000,000,000 candle-power will sweep the skies, heralding arrival of the current.

Ceremonies at the civic center, including a Nation-wide broadcast, will start at 7 p. m. (10 p. m. E. S. T.).

At 7:36, Miss Elizabeth scattergood will touch a key to start the current, which will light a huge orange-hued arc. Fourteen minutes later, a parade of 40 illuminated floats, 6,000 persons and bands will move through the streets.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 8.—General officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Virginia and delegates from the 189 adult local unions in the State began arriving here today to attend the fifty-fourth annual convention of the organization, which opens tomorrow and continues through next Monday evening.

The four-day program includes convention business, religious services, music, addresses by visitors and several talks by Dr. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., world president of the W. C. T. U.

State officers here for the convention include the president, Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, Lincoln; vice president-at-large, Mrs. Walter H. Page, Charlottesville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lilian A. Shepherd, Norfolk; recording secretary, Mrs. Evalyn G. Peterson, Pamplin; treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Strickler, Norfolk. These officers are now quartered at the Dolly Madison Inn, near the university, the same house in which the Charlottesville union was organized on December 29, 1882.

2 Autoists Die In Car Crashes; F.P.C. Aid Hurt

Injuries Fatal to Wife of Federal Engineer; Truck Driver Killed.

The wife of a Government official and an Alexandria truck driver were dead last night as the result of automobile accidents.

Mrs. Roger R. McWhorter, wife of the chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission, died in a hospital at Roanoke, Va., of auto accident injuries suffered the afternoon of September 30. Mrs. McWhorter lives at 3624 Davis street northwest.

The truck driver, George K. Bonner, 23, of 4 Myrtle avenue, Alexandria, was killed almost instantly last night as his truck overturned in a collision with another truck in the Washington-Richmond highway, opposite Colonial Tourist Camp in Virginia Highlands, Arlington County.

The heavy vehicle crushed Bonner beneath it as it caromed from the other truck and rolled over in a ditch. Dr. S. P. Nolan, acting Arlington County coroner, pronounced Bonner dead after bystanders extricated him from the wreckage.

On Way to Funeral.

Mrs. McWhorter and her husband were on their way to Courtland, Ala., to attend the funeral of her mother when the accident which resulted in her death occurred near Buchanan, Va.

Mr. McWhorter, also injured in the crash, is receiving treatment in the same hospital in which his wife died. Attendants yesterday said his condition was "satisfactory."

Mrs. McWhorter was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Tweedy, of Courtland. She was 42 years old. The body was en route to Courtland yesterday where funeral services were to be held today.

Arlington County police said Bonner was driving north and attempted to pass a truck driven by Elliott Thomas Byrd, 31, colored, 8 L street northwest. Byrd, driving in the same direction in another traffic lane, had signaled with his hand that he wished to turn left, police said.

Byrd was taken to Arlington County Jail and later released on $2,000 bond pending outcome of a coroner's inquest. Bonner's body was taken to C. J. Ives' funeral home in Clarendon.

Two Inquests Today.

Meanwhile, in Washington a coroner's jury today will review facts in the deaths of Mary Ellen Walker, 90, of the Grafton Hotel, 1139 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Sergt. Roy F. Miller, 28, of Fort Myer, whose deaths Wednesday night from automobile injuries brought the District traffic toll to 63 for the year.

Mrs. Walker died in Homeopathic Hospital Wednesday night from hip injuries received when she was knocked down by a street car September 12 while crossing the street in front of her home. Police said yesterday Cellie B. Capps, of 333 Seventeenth street southeast, motorman of the car, will appear at the inquest.

Sergt. Miller was killed almost instantly Wednesday night when the automobile in which he was riding overturned four times after striking a depression in Memorial avenue between the Arlington Memorial Bridge and Little River Bridge.

Corporal Harry K. Kershner, 23, also of Fort Myer, who police say was driving the car, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts to his face. He was released to military authorities and will be at the inquest.

Companion Gaining.

Ethel Richards, 27, of Lyon Park, Va., who received a fractured right foot, severe head cuts and internal injuries, was reported to be improving in Emergency Hospital last night.

Max Morris, 59, of 455 G street southwest, was admitted to Emergency Hospital yesterday, suffering severe cuts to his head and a broken nose when he was struck by a car at Seventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest. His condition was undetermined.

Police said Vincent A. Sheehy, jr., 31, of Hyattsville, Md., was the driver of the car. He was released pending the outcome of Morris' injuries.

Auto Fells Pedestrian.

James E. Delaney, 25, of 738 Newton street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for bruises to his leg and back when he was knocked down at Tenth street and Constitution avenue northwest. He was taken to the hospital by Alfred W. Powell, 38, of Arlington, Va., driver of the striking automobile.

Two small boys received a severe fright and slight lacerations yesterday when they released the handbrake of an automobile in which they were playing in the 4400 block Klingle road northwest and allowed the car to run wild across the street and into a parking.

The boys, Kenneth Moore, 5, and his brother John, 1, of 3210 Forty-fifth street northwest, were taken to Georgetown Hospital and treated.

Leonard Hurt, colored, 5, of 608 Third street southwest, was struck by an automobile at Second and E streets southwest while he was coasting in a wagon. He was treated at Providence Hospital for brush burns and cuts to his legs.

David F. Kane, 72, of Bealton, Va., was in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital last night after having been struck by an automobile operated by Walter W. Leach, 23, of 11 Rock Creek Church road, Lee highway, near Cherrydale.

Physicians said Kane suffered a fractured skull, a possible fracture of his neck and severe cuts and bruises.

Operator Held.

Leach was held for investigation pending the outcome of the aged man's injuries, and later released under $2,000 bond.

Charles Oswald, 41, of Waverly Hills, Va., was badly cut when his bicycle was struck by an automobile operated by J. E. Robertson, of the 5100 block of the Lee Highway in Glebe road yesterday. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Cuts of his face and neck were suffered late yesterday by William Voigt, 75, of Somerset, Md., when his wagon was struck by an automobile driven by James Pyper, colored, of 223 Third street southwest, in Wisconsin avenue, near Somerset drive.

He was given first aid by a private physician. Pyper was held for reckless driving and later released on bond.

James Moore, of Baileys Crossroads, Fairfax County, Va., suffered a possible fracture of the neck, and Robert Coleman, 1538 H street northwest, was believed to have received a broken back in a collision on the Columbia pike, near East Arlington, Va. Both are in a critical condition in Emergency Hospital.

Arlington County police said the car, driven by Moore, careened wildly down a hill, crashing into a truck operated by Aldrich W. Hitt, of Bon Air, Va. Hitt was uninjured.

Donna's Gentle Mien Wins Judge But Her Mistress Draws $5 Fine

Small Army of Witnesses Attest to Docility of Accused Shepherd Dog While Iglesias Neighbor Presses Viciousness Charge.

By taking the witness stand in her own defense, a German lady named Donna yesterday got her mistress off with a $5 fine. The mistress is Miss America Iglesias, daughter of Santiago Iglesias, Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico. Donna is a German shepherd dog.

A vicious dog, too, testified Mrs. Rachel Weinfeld, accusing the animal of having chased her 10-year-old-son, David. The Weinfelds are next-door neighbors of the Iglesias, who live at 3175 Porter street northwest, and Donna was on trial in Police Court before Judge Robert E. Mattingly.

The dog was charged with attacking David and the Weinfelds' maid, Virginia Harris, disturbing the peace wth her barking and howling and running at large at a time when, according to a District regulation, she should be confined.

Miss Iglesias and 16 others, including a veterinarian, were certain Donna is a gentle pet who likes children and deports herself in the best tradition. Character witnesses outnumbered the prosecution's supporters more than three to one.

But Judge Mattingly reserved decision until Donna was brought in. She didn't exactly take the stand, being too frisky to remain in one place for more than a few seconds, but frolicked in the courtroom after the court had ordered her unleashed.

"This dog doesn't look vicious to me," the judge said, after watching Donna allow two little boys to pull her tail and stick fingers in her mouth.

So he dismissed the three charges of biting and barking, but fined Miss Iglesias $5 on the fourth citation. The fine could have been as high as $20, under the regulation.

MEET CAPTAIN GOLDSTEIN

At a recent organization meeting of The Washington Post's Chapter of the Newspaper Boys of America, Sidney Goldstein, 16, 4330 Yuma street northwest, was appointed captain in the California Club, which serves Post subscribers in the Chevy Chase district. Sidney attends Woodrow Wilson High School, where he has a record for perfect attendance and punctuality. He is a First Lieutenant in the School Traffic Patrol and plays baseball, basketball and soccer. He enjoys all forms of athletics and his ambition is to become a "G" man. "I like my Post route," says Sidney, "because it teaches me the value of money and gives me the opportunity of meeting people." Character and citizenship are stressed in the training program sponsored by the Newspaper Boys of America, a national organization of which all Post carriers are members.
